GOVERNMENT ENTERS FIELD

Welfare Nursing Homes

The provincial government today made a major move into the intermediate health care field.

Victoria will get a 150-bed government-operated nursing home for welfare patients as part of the new policy, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark announced.

Two other 150-bed units will be built at Vancouver and Kamloops and a second Vancouver unit will follow soon after, Loffmark said.

The moves follow hints by Loffmark that the government would enter the intermediate care field as it has been pressured to do by the opposition parties and a number of Social Credit MLAs including Scott Wallace of Oak Bay.

Cost of the new facilities is expected to be several million dollars but no figure was released.

Loffmark could not immediately be reached to expand on his written announcement but it was learned that the nursing care to be provided will not come under the Provincial Hospital Insurance $1 a day program.

But since the program will initially be for social assistance recipients, the cost will be borne by governments in any case.

Loffmark said the new facilities will be for persons "whose needs cannot reasonably be met in a residential boarding home but who do not need the extensive nursing and amount of medical care provided in an extended care unit."

The facilities will serve people needing nursing care and help with such activities as dressing, washing or bathing but who do not require 24-hour supervision.

"They will be persons who will be able to move about without much assistance even though they may do this with the help of wheelchairs, canes or walkers."

Loffmark said the facilities would likely be extended to low-income groups as well as welfare recipients in the future.

The facility in Victoria will be adjacent to the Glendale hospital in Saanich. Vancouver's unit will be at the Pearson hospital and Kamloops' at the Royal Inland hospital.

A competition will be opened shortly for design, planning and supply of furniture for the units.

Turkey Invokes Martial Law; New Violence

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Army commanders took over Istanbul, Ankara and other key areas of Turkey today as Premier Nihat Erim's government invoked martial law to clamp down on politically-inspired violence.

The martial-law provisions, covering 11 of Turkey's 67 provinces, were announced by Justice Minister Ismail Arar following a renewed wave of violence, including kidnappings and student battles with police and among themselves.

They are the widest-ranging security measures since the Second World War, giving military governors the right to declare curfews, institute personal and house searches, try offenders against martial law regulations by military court, and control radio and telephone communications.

The decisions were made by the premier four days after he warned that the full force of law and order would be invoked against organized groups seeking anarchy in the country.

Erim took office last month after the country's generals, alarmed at the deteriorating security situation, ousted Suleyman Demirel's government, threatening to take over themselves if a strong new administration was not formed.

Martial law will be effective for an initial period of one month, and can then be renewed with parliamentary approval for two more consecutive months.

Ont. 'Opting Out' Threat to Ottawa

By HAROLD GREER
Special to the Times

TORONTO — Ontario wants to opt out of federal-provincial shared cost programs and obtain the same deal in "fiscal equivalence" as the federal government has given to Quebec.

This declaration of policy was contained in unequivocal terms in Monday's budget but treasurer Darcy McKeough admitted during a budget briefing with reporters that it is not final and unconditional.

It would depend, he said, on the outcome of negotiations now under way with Ottawa on the future financing of medicare, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

"But we have not seen any indication so far that we would not be better to opt out," McKeough said.

McKeough warned that unless the financial impasse between Ottawa and the provinces can be solved, there is little hope of progress in Canadian constitutional reform. The next conference on the constitution is to be held in Victoria in June.

'OBSTACLES'

"Until there is substantial progress in tax sharing and unless the provinces achieve better financial arrangements with the federal government," he said, "I can see major obstacles in the way of aspects of the constitutional review."

McKeough and his officials were vague in their descriptions of just what changes the federal government has proposed in the current formula for financing shared-cost programs with participating provinces.

It appears, however, that Ottawa has proposed a structure which would impose ceilings on expenditures for these programs in any given year and which would guarantee federal participation at least equal to current levels of support for the first year only.

In addition, Ottawa wants to integrate the medicare formula, which expires next year, with the hospital insurance formula.

NO CEILINGS

McKeough said Ontario does not believe ceilings can be placed on social programs which must increase with the growth in population, and that Ontario will be worse off.

BLEAK FUTURE FACES JOBLESS

OTTAWA (CP)—Unemployment problems are likely to persist in Canada for at least three years, Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said today.

The head of the federal advisory agency told the Commons finance committee that the effects of government policies of the last nine months to stimulate productive activity will be slow.

Any attempt to force a quicker pace of recovery would be difficult if not impossible, he said.

For example, the recent sharp expansion of money supply by the Bank of Canada, designed to make credit spending easier, will make an impact in 1972, not this year, Smith said.

Similarly, the full impact of increased government spending would not be felt until next year.

Benson Charges Blackmail

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson attacked sections of Ontario's new budget Monday, calling it "fiscal blackmail" designed to retard progress on constitutional reform.

"Blackmail is not the way to accomplish something," Benson said in an interview.

"Anyone can say they are going to stop playing if they don't get their way."

The finance minister said Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough was resorting to blackmail in threatening to block constitutional reform if Ottawa ignores Ontario's attempts to get a bigger share of tax revenue.

McKeough's budget speech Monday said Ottawa is discriminating against Ontario economically. The speech also raised the possibility that Ontario might quit shared-cost programs with the federal government.

Benson suggested if Ontario is unhappy with proposed new federal tax laws "they can go their own way, like Quebec, with a separate income tax."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett echoed Benson's disagreement with Ontario's tactics, but said he sympathizes with that province's position.

"I don't support that tactic," he said in an interview of McKeough's threat to block constitutional reform if it doesn't get a larger share of federal tax money.

"But I sympathize with Ontario ... Ontario and British Columbia are getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The premier said B.C. gets a worse deal than Ontario because Ontario gets the benefit of national tariff policy which works against the export economy of B.C.

But Ontario suffers from the "unfair advantage" being gained by Quebec by the federal government's policy of funnelling national resources into that province, Bennett said.

"I guess Ontario finally got fed up with it," Bennett said, adding that Quebec has been using the tactic of threatening to pull out of Confederation to get its way.

Trotskyists Disrupt Constitution Hearing

MONTREAL (CP) — A noisy Trotskyist group disrupted the first Montreal hearing of the parliamentary committee on the constitution for about an hour Monday night, demanding that unemployment and social problems be the topic of discussion.

Shortly after one of them displayed a sign saying "Quebec independence is not for discussion," the meeting broke up in tumult.

Their first attempt to speak was drowned out when most of the audience rose and sang O Canada, but at the end of the anthem the activists' chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois" — Quebec for Quebecers — continued.

While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau sat by committee chairman Gil Molgat, senator from Manitoba, a throng of demonstrators, reporters, photographers and spectators milled about.

The demonstrators demanded that Michel Chartrand, a labor leader and Quebec nationalist spokesman, act as chairman and that author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon be allowed to speak.

Mr. Chartrand was not present and Vallieres and Gagnon are in jail on charges of supporting the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

GAVE OUT HANDBILLS

The demonstrators, who numbered less than a dozen, earlier distributed handbills signed by the Young Socialist League saying the Canadian constitution made them vomit.

When the demonstrators left, Mayor Drapeau said he could speak only as an individual because the constitution recognizes only the federal and provincial levels of government.

He did say in reply to a question, however, that in any new constitution municipalities should be the responsibility of only one level of senior government, and that he preferred the provincial level.

The Canada Committee, an independent citizens' group said Canada's constitution must guarantee French-speaking Canadians in other provinces "the same rights heretofore accorded English-speaking Canadians in Quebec."

This included the right to education in French and access to government and court services in French.

The committee recommends reconsideration of the role of the monarchy, but not its abolition. "Let us not dispense with traditions which are not harmful to our unity," it says.

13 BRIEFS PRESENTED

Of 13 briefs from the floor, nine were presented in English, including three from immigrants to Canada. They ranged from a sarcastic presentation by a newly-graduated engineer to a whimsical expression of faith in the monarchy by a film maker.

A submission on equal rights for Indian women complained that Indian women who marry white men lose their status as Indians both for themselves and for their children.

It cited instances in which such Indian women and their children were left with no legal standing because they were never issued a "certificate of enfranchisement" which can be issued to persons who cease to be Indians under the Indian Act.

Diplomatic Break Close

The sources said India's deputy high commissioner in the East Pakistan capital of Dacca had been virtually interned along with his officers and staff.

ANTI-WAR, ECOLOGY LOBBIES UNITING . . .

Amchitka Growing Issue in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Rocks will slide down the cliffs into the sea, and the ground will roll like a trawler in the open ocean.

A 5,000-foot-wide crater will suddenly appear in the centre of Alaska's Amchitka Island, while deep in the island's volcanic rock the heat of the blast will create a huge cavern that will stay radioactive for a thousand years.

That will be Cannikin, a five megaton explosion planned for this fall that will be at once the largest underground atomic test in U.S. history and the focus of what promises to be one of the major rows in the United States in 1971.

The fact that Cannikin will be the first test of the warhead for the Spartan ABM will be enough to trigger the protests of the antiwar and disarmament lobbies. The fact that Cannikin will also explode with the force of a major earthquake is enough to touch off the tempers of most of the activists "in today's environmental movement.

"I've never seen anything like it," said an aide to an antiwar senator last week. "Where we are looking for an issue to revive the ABM debate, and the AEC drops Cannikin in our lap. It's almost enough to enlist every ecology freak in the country."

The AEC privately promises that Cannikin will be its last big underground Alaskan test for the foreseeable future," but opponents talk as if Cannikin itself should not take place.

Most of Alaska's and Hawaii's congressional delegation and a number of congressmen from the west coast have talked of fighting Cannikin. Mainly, they fear that the test will trigger earthquakes or submarine tidal waves that might damage their states.

Somewhat typical in this response was Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D—Hawaii), who said he remembered the tidal waves that struck Hawaii in 1946 and 1960, "both of which originated in the Aleutian chain following earthquakes.

"It appears that the Atomic Energy Commission intends to conduct this test," Matsunaga said, "without releasing full information about the possibilities that it may cause a major earthquake and a resultant Tsunami (underwater tidal wave) which may

IT'S 'BE PREPARED' TO FIGHT DIRTY

LONDON (AP)—Be prepared the Boy Scout movement exhorts its young followers, and today a British Boy Scout magazine said one of the preparations should be learning how to fight dirty.

The Fourth Warwickshire scout group magazine advised scouts under attack to knee the opponent in the groin, shove two fingers up his nose, stamp on his feet or scrape a heel down his shins.

"Obviously such methods should not be used in ordinary rough-and-tumble," said the Earl of Aylesford, Warwickshire's scout commissioner, "but it is right that scouts should know about them.

"It is no good being gentlemanly if you are in danger of being killed or seriously injured.

Shadow Mischief

Oak Bay Boosts Mayor's Salary

Faced with a five-mill or $260,000 increase in general taxes, Oak Bay council began trimming costs Monday night.

Some minor items were deleted from the budget but the estimates committee will get down to the larger construction and capital items Wednesday.

Aldermen did, however, raise one cost: They decided to increase Mayor Frances Elford's salary $300 to $450 a month.

This was done to bring it back in line with former council policy under which the mayor had been paid three times the amount received by aldermen.

Ald. Douglas Watts said that over the years the ratio of difference had been decreased from three to double the salary of other council members.

"As our mayor works full-time, in fact, I think more than full-time, I think we should repair some of this damage," he said.

It was agreed the mayor was required to attend many more meetings than council members and additional expenses, such as clothing, were incurred in the work.

A bylaw amendment will have to be made for the change in the mayor's salary. Of the $450, $150 will be considered as expenses, the remainder as salary.

Watts said consideration should be given to making smaller wage increases at more frequent intervals, rather than allowing situations to develop to the point at which major increases are required.

Council will hold another paring session Wednesday in an attempt to stop the mill rate from rising from 34.78 to 39.77.

Vallieres Jailed On Contempt Charges

MONTREAL (CP) — Author Pierre Vallieres was sentenced Tuesday to six months in prison after being cited twice for contempt of court.

Vallieres, charged with day by Mr. Justice Laurent Belanger to show reason why he should not be found in contempt after describing the judge as "partial, inhuman and a torturer."

When he appeared in court Tuesday, Vallieres said he stood by his accusations.

Vallieres, charged with seditious conspiracy, is also appealing two previous sentences of contempt totalling seven months and awaiting sentence on another contempt charge May 3.

"The court of justice," he shouted Tuesday after being sentenced, "I haven't see a court of justice since 1960.

"I have seen the court of injustice, of repression and obscurantism, and I have had enough of the underhandedness of the administration, of this so-called justice which serves the political process as an instrument of fear, of repression and alienation."

NEW LONDON AIRPORT FINALLY LOCATED

LONDON (AP)—The British government decided Monday, after 10 years of stormy public debate and protests, to put London's third international airport on the east coast of England at the mouth of the Thames.

John Davies, secretary of state for trade and industry, told the House of Commons the airport would be built at Foulness, a desolate promontory overlooking the North Sea just north of the Thames estuary.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission reported the receipt of seismic signals presumably caused by a Soviet underground nuclear test. The signals came from the Semipalatinsk area in Soviet Siberia, the usual Soviet testing ground.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

relative to other provinces, under the federal proposals.

In his formal budget address, McKeough put it this way:

"In preparation for the renegotiation of the existing shared-cost agreements, the federal government has increasingly been developing various new formula approaches in such fields as health insurance and post-secondary education.

"While there may be some merit in these formulae themselves, the one obvious feature of them is that they reduce the future federal financial commitment in these established shared-cost programs.

'EVEN WORSE'

"If these formulae were implemented, therefore, the provinces would find themselves in an even worse financial predicament, while the federal government would acquire added capacity to invent new programs and to further encroach on other government's responsibilities.

"This government cannot accept this application of federal leverage on its future budgetary flexibility. According, I wish to state now our clear intention to assume complete responsibility for the shared-cost programs in exchange for fiscal equivalence and to resist vigorously the establishment of new share-cost programs.

"In the long run, this solution will serve all governments better. It will eliminate complex bureaucratic procedures and leave each level of government the full responsibility to plan and finance its own programs within its own framework of priorities."

McKeough said the federal government is "firmly bent on a course of greater centralization and concentration of power in its own hands" while Ontario believes the proper course for Canada to follow is "towards greater decentralization and recognition of regional differences."

REDUCED ROLE

He charged that Ontario has been "singled out for a reduced role in the building of our nation" and that the intention of Ottawa "seems to be one of reducing regional disparities in Canada by diminishing the economic strength and standard of living in Ontario."

He said this is self-defeating because Ontario must be economically strong in order to finance equalization payments to less wealthy regions.

Quebec is the only province to opt out of federal-provincial shared cost programs now. This results, instead of a federal contribution to the programs involved, in an extra abatement to the Quebec government of 21 percentage points of federal income tax paid by Quebec residents.

This "fiscal equivalence" produced a transfer to some $368 million from Ottawa to Quebec during the last fiscal year.

Bruce Now Liquor Head

William Bruce, acting chairman of the Liquor Control Board since 1969, has been appointed full-fledged chairman of the board.

The move, announced today by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, ended months of speculation over the possibility that an outside appointment would be made.

Peterson said the 55-year-old Bruce has "demonstrated a tremendous knowledge and administrative ability . . . he has served the board for 24 years and his experience is a great asset."

Bruce, who took over as acting chairman when Col. Donald McGugan retired, was born in Vancouver and attended school there. He joined the B.C. police force in 1935 and transferred to the LCB as an inspector in 1947. He became executive assistant to the board in 1958.

He is married and has two children and lives on Lansdowne Road in Victoria.

International Pollution Code Urged by Davis

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says his department is pushing for a set of international standards on pollution.

Davis told a service club conference that the fisheries department is working with a number of international agencies on the problem.

He said Canada's 145 pulp mills will have to meet new international standards within the next year or two under the Canada Water Act.

Davis said other industries — such as petroleum refining, food processing, petro-chemical plants, mines and smelters — will all soon come under new legislation.

The minister said the old cry that a little pollution is a good thing and that the pulp smell means dollars and cents is dead.

Motorcycle Rider Hurt

Gregory Loewen, 1263 Fort, received multiple fractures to one leg when hit by a car driven by William R. Hudson, 2314 Oak Bay.

Loewen was the second motor cyclist involved in an accident since Sunday when John Marashall Fox, 23, of 1857 Fern, was killed in a crash with a car at Cook and Pandora.

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre said Monday he will conduct an inquest into Fox's death at the McCall Bros. funeral home, 1400 Vancouver, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Tax Relief Urged For Anti-Polluters

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—The president of the Kamloops Pulp and Paper Co. said Monday companies that spend money on pollution abatement should receive tax relief.

Thomas Rust said such relief is "absolutely necessary" if the pulp and paper industry is to comply with pollution standards set up by federal and provincial governments.

He proposes that companies be allowed to earn a tax-free allowance of up to one-third of taxable income.

cause serious damage to places like Hawaii."

Even the United Nations association (UNA) has now picked up the environmental issue that surrounds Cannikin, and it did so in a way calculated to delay the test as long as possible.

In letters sent over the weekend to the Environmental Protection Agency and President Nixon's Council on Environmental Quality, the UNA claimed that under law the AEC is required to show proof that Cannikin will not do undue environmental harm.

The UNA charged that the AEC is deliberately delaying its environmental statement to rush Cannikin through congress. The AEC vigorously denies the charge.

"The AEC is complying with the environmental policy act," and AEC spokesman said. "We issued a draft statement last June, and a final statement will be issued as soon as possible, well in advance of the readiness date of the planned experiment."

The AEC contends it has never worked harder than it has on Cannikin to make sure a test does not backfire.

It says it will emplace the Cannikin device in a hole more than 6,000 feet deep on Amchitka, which is made up almost entirely of hard, volcanic rock. This is the same rock, the AEC points out, in which it has tested two other atomic explosives (Long Shot in 1966, Milrow in 1969) without any trouble.

There will be rockfalls, the AEC admits, just as there were in Milrow, and the heat of the Cannikin explosion will create an underground cavity 500 to 1,000 feet across that will be intensely radioactive.

The AEC vigorously denies that Cannikin will release any radiation to the air or water. At worst, radioactive tritium will seep from the blast site to the ocean in three years, at which point it will be diluted by sea water in a ration of one million to one.

Most likely, the AEC says, the tritium will take 100 to 1,000 years to reach the sea, at which time much of it will no longer be radioactive.

The biggest debate is over whether Cannikin will trip a major natural earthquake or a submarine tidal wave.

"The AEC admits there is a chance that radioactivity might pour into the ocean three years after the test," says an aide to Sen. Mike Gravel (D—Alaska), perhaps the most persistent Cannikin critic. "So long as there's that chance there's a risk, isn't there? Is it worth that risk?"

The critics contend that the AEC does not know the real earthquake risks of Cannikin, particularly since Amchitka lies right in the middle of the Alutian Island chain, which not only has its share of earthquakes but also breeds some of the most active volcanoes in North America.

"This is close to the only thing that really worries us," admitted an AEC official last week. "What happens if a natural earthquake occurs right after Cannikin or if a volcano like St. Augustine near Cook Inlet decides to blow right after Cannikin? No matter what science said, nobody would believe that Cannikin didn't touch them off."

Hoffa Again Before Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — James R. Hoffa, Teamsters union president, has been brought here from a federal prison to appear today before a federal grand jury investigating alleged misuse of the union's pension fund.

Two marshals brought Hoffa here by car Monday from the Lewsburg, Pa., prison where he is serving a 13-year sentence for mail fraud and jury tampering.

PROTECTION FOR QUEBEC FRANCOPHONES

Working Language Bill Urged

MONTREAL (CP) — Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer said Monday night he will recommend that the Quebec government amend the Labor Code to guarantee the rights of French-speaking workers rather than introduce legislation making French the working language of the province.

Mr. Cournoyer said in an interview his recommendations are based on the findings of a just-completed study by the Council on Labor and Manpower.

The study was instituted last February at Mr. Cournoyer's request following a strike at the General Motors Corp. plant in Ste. Therese.

"The whole thing boils down to the language of communication, not the language of work," he said.

"People will have the right to use the language of their choice, but the government will not force the choice upon all the people.

"Our position is that the people in the shops should have some say in the use of the language of the plant."

Mr. Cournoyer said he would recommend that strict measures be taken to guarantee that any French-speaking worker involved in a grievance case be given the right to state his case in the language of his choice.

Mr. Cournoyer requested the report after the GM strikers in Ste. Therese demanded recognition of French as the working language.

Premier Bourassa's government announced in February its objective of making French the working language of the province.

Guaranteed Annual Income Pressed by Welfare Body

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — "It is time we extended this welfare state to include the poor," the National Council of Welfare said today in launching an attack on the existing system and proposed federal government changes in it.

An immediate start is urged by the council on the payment of a guaranteed adequate income that at least assures everyone of poverty-line basics in food, clothing and housing.

The statement is the product of a six-month study by the council, a federally-appointed advisory body composed largely of welfare rights and poor people's representatives and voluntary agency workers.

It levels almost unprecedented criticism at federal policies and plans, specifically attacking federal taxation and monetary policy intended to fight inflation as producing unemployed who were labelled deadbeats for seeking welfare assistance.

It indicts Welfare Minister John Munro's white paper on income security, tabled last Nov. 30 in the Commons, as likely to mislead people into believing something will be done to help poorer people.

The 33-page statement says Canadians should accept the principle that "every member of Canadian society has a right to a share of the national wealth sufficient to enable him to participate fully in that society."

Scouts Looking To Democracy

The Boy Scout movement is introducing democratic procedures among its older members, the executive director of the Boy Scouts of Canada said here Monday.

J. Percy Ross, who is here on a cross-country tour, said that Venture Scouts, who fall into the 14 to 17 age group, are being urged to decide their own activities, which formerly were left up to adult leaders.

This summer, in their national conference in Saskatoon, Rover Scouts (17-21) will be asked to suggest changes in a new program drawn up for them.

Ross said that the movement has had to make concessions to social and technological changes during the last decade, and he's satisfied it's more in tune with the times now than every before.

LACK CHOICE

"Ten years ago there wasn't the choice for boys 11 to 17 that there is today. Now there's a lot more organizations competing for a boy's time. We're not in competition with these organizations, we're just one of the alternatives that boys can turn to."

Asked about its para-military appearances, Ross said that the movement never intended to be such.

"I suppose a lot of people think it is a military organization because we have uniforms and we got started by an army general, so really we got off on the wrong foot," Ross said.

BROTHERHOOD

"We really supplement what the church, school and home are trying to do. We try to bring a young person into a knowledge of God, we try to instil a sense of brotherhood and we instil a sense of the rights of others.

"We also try to instil a sense of patriotism — I guess that's a bad word now. Let's say a love of one's country."

Ross said it is estimated by the turn of the century 80 per cent of the population of Canada will live in 35 urban centres, and for this reason the Boy Scouts of Canada is seeking future leaders in places like Winnipeg, Montreal and Toronto.

The number of youths in the movement in English Canada is somewhere between 235,000 and 240,000, Ross said. Greater Victoria membership numbers about 3,700.

PROMOTE SCOUTING

The Scouts are currently raising $50,000 from among its members to pay for the cost of boosting Scouting in the Caribbean, Ross said. A full-time representative is travelling through the various islands drumming up support for Scouting among heads of corporations and other leading citizens.

The Canada International Development Agency is also assisting with funding of the project.

JUDGES DO FAIR THING

LOUGHBROUGH, England (UPI) — The judges did the only fair thing Saturday when 150 customers at the Palace bingo hall hit a winning "full house" at the same time.

Underground Mines Must Clean Up

Underground coal mines will be required to post security bonds and follow land and water reclamation plans under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, the provincial cabinet has decreed.

The only underground coal mine in operation in B.C. is Kaiser Resources, Ltd. Hydraulic mining project at Natal-Michel, where coal slurry ponds overflowed earlier this year.

But Deputy Mines Minister Ken Blakey said the order is not specifically aimed at the Kaiser operation. It will bring all such mines under the 1969 legislation in future.

Underground mines may be in operation in the Peace River region, he said.

The pollution control branch gave Kaiser a May 3 deadline to clean up its Natal-Michel operation.

A shopping trip to Vancouver is planned for May 20 and a Gulf Island round-trip tour May 27.

DBS Swinging Mod To Explain Census

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — A new booklet explaining the hows and whys of census-taking is enough to make one wonder whether the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has gone mod.

Beneath its passionate purple cover, it aims to tell the Canadian "everything you always wanted to know about the census (but were afraid to ask)."

"June 1 is census day. Count yourself in," is its rallying cry, discreetly printed in black beneath the Canadian flag bravely flying from a pencil.

With its simple English, lack of jargon, and attempts to sweeten the prosaic facts of census-taking with interesting anecdotes, cartoons and graphs, the breezy booklet is a far cry from the sheafs of complicated statistics and studies which frequently flow from DBS.

SEEN AS LEADER

Take the cartoon by Len Norris of the Vancouver Sun showing stymied census-takers balefully regarding two long-haired individuals in sloppy sweaters and pants. "No dar, I'm Penelope . . . you are Harry," says one long-hair to the other.

Attending to more serious matters, the 20-page booklet proclaims proudly that: "The modern census originated in Canada! And we are still regarded abroad as a world leader in many aspects of census-taking."

For Services Performed

THE GENERAL PRINCIPLE governing the income of members of Parliament as enunciated by Prime Minister Trudeau is fair enough: that salaries and expense accounts should not be so high as to attract candidates interested only in the money, nor so low as to deter candidates who need an adequate income to finance their services to the nation. Somewhere in between these extremes lies the ideal amount. It may be difficult to argue that the proposed increases in both pay and expense accounts are not necessary for an MP saddled with the costs of travel, maintaining two domestic establishments and responding to innumerable requests for contributions. It is easier to say that the timing of these sizable pay boosts is unfortunate.

We have the country's severe unemployment, the government's request that wage increases be kept to a minimum to combat inflation, the announcement of greatly increased postal rates, and Mr. Benson's threatened tax revisions hanging over everyone. With such considerations in mind, the announcement of a parliamentary salary increase of $6,000 a year to $18,000, and a $2,000 tax-free expense allowance increase to $8,000, for a total of $26,000, will not go down well with the public.

It is not so much that the total expenditure will have a significant impact on the nation's multi-billion-dollar budget, or that there are not some members whose efforts may well entitle them to the proposed income. But the move is bound to rouse widespread criticism, and much of it will be exaggerated, with a consequent disadvantage to the deserving members.

One proposed raise for a government employee should receive popular approval: it will put the auditor-general's income on a level with that of the chief justice of the federal court of Canada. The auditor-general is the man who each year exposes to Parliament's gaze the incompetencies, errors and surreptitious doings of members and government employees which result in waste of the public's money. His complaint has been that he has not sufficient staff to carry out his full duties. His own salary adjustment should be complemented by a staff appropriation which will enable him to do an even better job of detecting waste.

Then, if the well imbursed members of Parliament will earn their increase by doing something about the auditor-general's revelations instead of shelving them, the Canadian public might get their money's worth after all.

The Bad With the Good

THE TRADITIONAL DISDAIN of some authors and publishers towards the profit-oriented demands of commerce is a facet of Canadian book publishing which, to a considerable degree, might explain the plight of the industry.

There is a market for books in Canada, to be sure. In 1969 the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce conducted a survey and came up with the figures that of an estimated $222 millions worth of books purchased by Canadians in 1969, 65 per cent were imported, 10 per cent were foreign books adapted for the Canadian market and 25 per cent were manufactured and published here.

It has been argued that it is necessary for a publisher to sell a line of second-rate but profitable works in order to afford the risks inherent in the selling of first-rate books to the discerning few. As the Toronto businessman, Mr. Jack Cole, says: "The trouble with Canadian publishing is that no one has treated it as a business. The people who run the publishing industry are not business minded. They don't know how to make money . . ." Mr. Cole argues for the necessity of an inferior literature to support a top notch superior brand of writing.

A situation in which it has been said that all the major publishers would sell out if they could is not a good omen for the future of Canadian culture. But subsidizing publishers will not permanently help matters, and even the granting of long term loans must be viewed warily in light of the financial position of the industry.

Consolidation of the industry which would at the same time ensure Canadian ownership may be in order. In addition, efforts should be increased to penetrate the United States market, now that Canadian copyrights are no longer endangered there.

Fear of Disintegration

THE AMBITIONS OF THE leader of the East Pakistanis, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, were frustrated, reportedly, because of his demands for economic autonomy rather than because of his request for strictly political power. Why should the central government have so harshly disposed of Sheikh Mujibur because of his desires to see East Pakistan regain some of the wealth it had lost to the West through federal arrangements?

The Financial Times of London explains that the repressive strategy of the federal government was based on fear of causing rivalry among the provinces which go to make up the political heart of Pakistan — the Western section. Regional passions, the newspaper contends, have become more evident, and the rise of provincialism could have led to the total break-up of Pakistan by causing dissent among the components of the Pakistani Army, largely recruited from the West.

The fragility of the ties which bind the Pakistani East and West have been made plain for the world to see. The possibility that elements within the West section could bring about even deeper divisions within the Islamic state adds another dimension to the conflict in the Indian subcontinent.

An Immodest Proposal

MAVERICK LIBERAL MP Paul Hellyer's remarks on television, that probably 50 per cent of Ottawa's senior civil servants should be replaced, harkens back to an old and shaky conception of democracy.

The need to prevent bureaucratic sclerosis is often apparent: old ways and old ideas tend to block new approaches to old problems. On the other hand, without secure tenure the expert civil servants who have risen to power could not exercise the often commanding and irreplaceable authority they have over their departments.

The opposite to security of tenure and seniority would not necessarily be a flexibility which caters to youth; it could as well become a new form of vested interest, or a veiled return to the spoils system.

". . . this may sound funny . . . but I kinda miss our insane, corrupt society . . ."

Example Set

Toronto Daily Star

President Nixon is looking for a formula that will admit Communist China to the United Nations, without Nationalist China being expelled from the international body. He might examine the Canadian form of recognition of Peking.

The Nixon administration apparently shares the previous Johnson administration's view that 20 years of U.S. efforts to "contain" Communist China should be replaced with "reconciliation." Peking, however, has failed to respond to small American trade and passport overtures and insists on expulsion of Taiwan from the UN.

Canada recognizes the Peking regime as the sole legal government of China, but only "takes note" of Peking's claim that Taiwan is "an inalienable part" of the People's Republic of China.

The fact that Peking swallowed this from Mitchell Sharp suggests the Canadian formula might be applied more widely. If so, Taiwan could stay in the UN even if Peking were also admitted; that would now satisfy the Americans.

The Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan still insists it represents "China," not just Taiwan and on that score broke off relations with Canada. So the next step in solving the problem might be to add the German formula to the Canadian formula and call China two states in one nation, as Willy Brandt proposed for divided Germany.

FROM OTTAWA

By PAUL WHITELAW

A Splinter in the NDP Federal Timber

THE newly-elected leader of the NDP, David Lewis, says that the party's stand on Quebec's place in Confederation will have to be followed by the NDP's dissident Quebec wing. Mr. Lewis says that he disagrees with a statement by the leader of the NDP in Quebec that he will continue to espouse a policy on Quebec's federal role which differs from a policy adopted Friday by an overwhelming majority of delegates to the NDP national convention here.

But Mr. Lewis adds that he believes there will be no split by the Quebec wing from the federal party following a bitter debate at the convention between the Quebecers, who wanted a policy recognizing their province's "right to self-determination," and supporters of the staunchly-federalist resolution that was eventually passed.

Referring to a statement by Quebec leader Raymond Laliberte that he will present his "self-determination" policy as the position of the NDP, Mr. Lewis said he believes such a breach of unity would not be permitted by the party's constitution.

Mr. Lewis said that the right of provincial autonomy to which Mr. Laliberte referred in an interview on Friday refers to NDP wings involved in provincial politics and not at the federal level.

Concentrating on Ottawa

The tiny Quebec wing, which has less than 900 members, voted at a convention in February to withdraw from provincial politics and devote its energy to the federal arena. The NDP has never elected a Quebec candidate to the provincial legislature or to the House of Commons.

Referring to a possible split with Quebec over the Quebec resolution adopted at the convention, Mr. Lewis said he believes that the Quebecers will decide to accept it, then hold another provincial convention in June.

"I think the people of Quebec will have seen by the vigorous debate on the issue, how concerned we are about Quebec. The size of the Quebec delegation (40 out of more than 1,600) was not a factor. I also think they will have seen from the crisis last fall (NDP opposition to the War Measures Act) that we are guys who stand on principle," he said.

"I take without hesitation Mr. Laliberte's statement that he is not a separatist," he added, referring to the former president of the nationalistic Quebec Teachers Corporation.

Mr. Lewis admitted that there is a possibility some Quebec members may leave the party, but that the NDP presence will not disappear.

Mr. Laliberte said in an interview on Friday after the pro-federalist resolution was adopted that he wants to consider all the possibilities of what happened at the convention before adopting a final stand.

An influential source in the Quebec wing said that no more than a few of the delegation's more radical members expected there could be an eventual split. He said the rest were undecided.

No Lasting Harm

Mr. Lewis says that he doesn't believe the divisions at the convention have done any lasting harm, and that the NDP may gain more voters in Quebec by a change of strategy that will be used in the next federal election.

"I think we will increase our vote in Quebec by concentrating on ridings in east-end Montreal, the same type of working-class ridings as those in Toronto where we draw strong support," said the NDP chief, referring to past elections when the party concentrated on more affluent and English areas.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Spec Sponsorship

Your newspaper recently carried a report of the meeting on April 17 at the University of Victoria at which Dr. John W. Gofman spoke on the hazards of nuclear radiation.

No mention was made that the speaker was sponsored locally by the Victoria Branch of SPEC in conjunction with the other lower island branches (as was also his Nanaimo visit). The Sierra Club sponsored the main part of his trip from California.

Now perhaps this is a minor omission but as some people are under the impression that SPEC is just a "protest group" which is "opposed to everything" we feel it may help to enlighten those so deluded if the report on such educational events credited the appropriate organization. — J. White, Pres. SPEC, Victoria Branch.

Insulting

If freedom of the press means a licence to insult honoured guests of whatever nationality and who are here at our invitation, then perhaps we should look at this freedom from a control point of view.

I refer to Mr. Scott's column on HMY Britannia (the Times, April 23rd). He is of course fully entitled to his opinion whatever it is based on and whatever it may be. I would submit however that his column is grossly insulting to our guests who, because of their position are unable to reply and must remain sitting targets for abuse. If Mr. Scott really feels so strongly about something which is actually none of his business then the least he could do would be to wait until his guests have left. On the other hand of course perhaps all he is doing is courting some cheap publicity?

I would like to offer an apology to our guests and to assure them that whatever our various opinions may be on the Royal Family, most Victorians are not prone to insult their guests in this manner. — A. J. Broome, 2275 Dunlevy.

Library

When the "Citizen's Conference on Libraries" was first mentioned in the press, the idea appeared to have considerable possibilities. However, the recent report of the interview with the lady who is "co-ordinator" for this conference raises grave doubts.

If she "goes to a bookstore" when she wants a book to read, she must either have a fabulous salary, or else read very little; few of the patrons of the Victoria Public Library could afford to purchase a fraction of the books they borrow from the library.

She herself is apparently unaware of the actual (not potential) services offered by our Library; it has been providing for many years most if not all of the services which she lists as potentials "for just a few tax-dollars more!"

With regard to the "Citizen's Conference," it is readily understandable that the library profession, the trustees and the provincial government would be represented, but if the balance of the 250 members are to be "invited" — by whom, is not disclosed — it would appear to be incorrect to term them "delegates," as they will not represent anyone in particular. The idea that these "delegates" should go back "home" and organize conferences appears most impracticable and time-wasting. A properly elected Library Board (on the same lines as a school board) could perform the task of improving library services much more efficiently and with greater authority. — N. T. Porter, 245 Linden.

(Ed. note: The purpose of the conference is to hold workshops at which representative citizens from all over the province may exchange views and learn new facts, for the betterment of libraries everywhere. The great majority of those invited are laymen.)

Appalled

I was appalled to read in Elizabeth Forbes' column that she is "bored to tears" with the plight of the three professors at Uvic.

It is incredible to me that in a country which prides itself on considering even a criminal innocent until proved otherwise, these men are being mentally tried, convicted, and sentenced while they themselves do not know of what they are being accused. — "For Justice."

'Quite a Welcome'

First we have the ill-timed remark about "Abolition of the Monarchy" on the eve of Her Majesty's visit to Canada.

Then, for good measure you publish Jack Scott's column criticising the presence of the Royal Yacht "Britannia" here — quite a welcome I'm sure to the Commander and his men — rather like insulting guests at your dinner table.

If Jack Scott is so concerned about expense, let him write about all the expensive commissions and committees this Trudeau government is wasting millions of our money on, instead of trying to stimulate industry and get people off the welfare rolls and back to work.

I'd also like to remind Jack Scott that Her Majesty has not had a "raise in pay" for many years in spite of rising costs in running the Royal households. —Dorothy Hewitt, 929 Victoria.

Desirable Check

I am a student at the University of Victoria who would like to express my views on the monarchy.

In my opinion the monarchy is the only method we can count on for protection, not only from other countries, but from ourselves. The monarchy does not hinder us in any way, but serves as a safeguard against extreme abuse of power by any government, a situation not entirely unheard of even in this young and fairly innocent nation. For example, when the Social Credit party came to power in the 1930s in Alberta, one of the first pieces of legislation passed was an order banning all newsmen from the legislature. The only thing that stopped this bill from becoming law was the refusal of the lieutenant-governor to sign it.

Of those who feel the monarchy should go and a republican system be set up, I would like to ask two questions:

First, what kind of a republic would you like to turn into — like the United States, like Russia, like Germany, like Cuba?

Second, would you like to take responsibility for electing any government with the power and perhaps the potential to ruin this country? Do you not feel that some form of protection is necessary, something we have now in the monarchy, something which could not be copied in a republican system without political involvement?

I do not consider myself an English Canadian. I am simply Canadian.

Governments operate on the assumption of power and we have the monarchy here to check ours should it overstep its constitutional boundaries. I think it is a fair system and should not be thrown away. — Ian A. Cox, 2680 Macdonald.

One Nation

As a member of the Single Canada League but unable to attend Dr. Thorson's meeting, may I say that the report in the Times gave me the information that I expected to read.

The rush to join the Single Canada League on the one theme of bilingualism shows a misconception as to the total aims of the Single Canada League — which its title states — Single Canada, meaning a distinctive nation or people, unhyphenated Canadians, whether they are of British origin or not.

It would be wrong to assume that Dr. Thorson's sole purpose is anti-bilingualism.

To clear up another point, Dr. Thorson approves of our Maple Leaf flag.

I have reason to believe this will be a shock for some of the new members.

Dr. Thorson is a dedicated Canadian. —Len Skelton, 4068 Grange.

Fed Up

I am fed up with so much criticism of the RCMP. It usually comes from someone who does not know about the work the RCMP does.

I was born in Eastern Ontario 85 years ago and saw NWMP and RCMP in action. My people were in no way connected with RCMP and I was never connected with the work of the police. They worked for small salaries and they have a lot of praise coming to them. I was many years in Western Canada. The police did not want you to be spotters but they did want you to tell the truth if asked for support. — J. B. Lorimer, 1165 Yates.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"HOW COME YOU'RE STAYIN' IN THERE SO LONG, DAD? YOU BEIN' PUNISHED FOR SOMETHIN'?"

Looking Back

From the Times of April 27, 1911:

Ottawa — Liberal members in caucus this morning promptly decided to accept the challenge of the opposition for a fight "to the bitter end" on the reciprocity issue, and it was unanimously agreed that it would not be Liberals who would finally get "the bitter end."

There is no question of compromise on the reciprocity issue so far as the government is concerned. Liberal members say they can stand any endurance test as well as opposition members can.

The Drop Outs

By JOYCE EGGINTON

William DeBekker, 21 years a New York policeman, recently sold up his possessions and moved his family to a small community, barely on the map, surrounded by the prairies and deserts of Colorado.

"We shall not be back," he remarked upon leaving, "even if we go bankrupt." His wife explained the move more succinctly: "We brought up two of our kids (in the New York suburbs) and they made it without narcotics, but the way things are going I doubt if the younger two would make it."

The DeBekkers typify thousands who are deliberately dropping out of the mainstream of American life. An increasing number leave the country every year while many more are forsaking urban neighborhoods for the wide open spaces of Florida and the west. In most cases they are also giving up security, an established pattern of life and material comforts which they used to take for granted.

Father and son emerge from make-shift sauna

crushing problems or urban living. America has always been a nation of movers, but until recently most of the moving has been in the direction of the cities. Now it is away from them, as far as it is feasible to go.

A public opinion poll has shown a tremendous increase in the number of Americans who would like to leave the country, but cannot. Of those who do, the largest number go to Canada, with Britain next on the list, no doubt because of the common language. Australia, with its severe restrictions on colored immigrants, also has an appeal for white Americans who want to escape from racial tensions. The exodus to Canada has now reached the proportion of 23,000 a year; 25 years ago it was only 9,000.

Racial tensions, crime, drug addiction, air pollution and the general over-crowding of urban areas are the reasons most cited by the migrants. It is no longer pleasurable to live in a large American city, they say, and no longer possible to escape for a day's trip to the country, not without spending hours swallowing somebody else's petrol fumes in a traffic jam.

A newer reason, which is given more and more, has to do with a change in the sense of values. Many educated Americans are coming to share anthropologist Margaret Mead's revulsion against the "frightful philosophy" of suburban living which dictates that "we have to have two cars in every garage and two vacuum cleaners for every home (one for upstairs and one for downstairs), plus power-driven lawn mowers for every square inch of grass."

This revolt against materialism, which has long been widespread among the young, is breeding a new type of American rebel: the executive drop-out.

Nowadays there are frequently stories of the $50,000 a year man who, having educated his children, has suddenly decided to turn his back on opulence and do some unexpected, off-beat thing like buying an isolated small farm and living off his own produce.

One drop-out of our acquaintance, a man in his fifties, gave up an executive job to settle for a reduced pension on which he is now happily living with his wife in a tumbledown farm-house on a deserted stretch of the Irish coast.

One advertising agency executive who dropped out to try to scrape a living as an artist said that his ultimate goal is to go to Alaska and get away from people. "I just don't like humans."

Another man, whose entire life history marked him as an epitome of the Establishment, gave it all up to live on a commune miles from anywhere. Although the transition has not been easy for any of these people, almost all of them say they could never go back to their old way of life.

Most of the new American migrants settle for something between the two extreme ways of living. They move from an American city to an American village, or to a European city where the pace of life is calmer and the tensions are less.

London is attracting many expatriate Americans, despite the higher British taxes. One of the most publicized has been the American humorist S. J. Perelman who says he intends to live and work in England for the rest of his life. He has contrasted the courtesy he found in London with the indifference of New York, adding that life in the United States has become "so filled with insanity and violence that the (American) newspapers from which I derive many of my ideas have scant room for the sort of thing which turns me on."

Most expatriate Americans opt to keep their citizenship, forming a breed like the expatriate British of colonial times: still patriotic at heart, sometimes yearning a little for their homeland, but convinced that they have found a better way of life.

One expatriate of 50 years, Miss Janet Flanner, who writes a regular Paris diary for the New Yorker magazine, recently made a trip back to New York and summed up her impressions like this: "All the bad things seem to have become worse things. This is a period of demoralization and anarchy ... a sad period for my country." She returned to Paris gratefully, commenting that "one of the advantages of being in France is that you're in France."

Riot Pierced Sentiment Fog About Prisons

(The Toronto Star)

The riot at Kingston Penitentiary — in some ways the worst in our history — ended in a truly Canadian manner. Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer, on behalf of the government, announced that a board of inquiry will investigate the uprising and that in future greater attention will be paid to the rahabilitation of convicts.

Investigation and rehabilitation — these have been the key words in discussion of the Canadian penal system for a generation. As yet, little has come from all the various investigations; and our efforts at rehabilitating prisoners have not had much success.

We shall have to try harder to reform the reformables; but the Kingston riot was a grim demonstration that discipline and security cannot be neglected either.

For four days the rebel prisoners were in command in the Kingston cellblocks, and whatever legitimate complaints they may have against the system, it cannot be said that they tried to launch Utopia in its place.

One prisoner was beaten to death, others beaten and seriously injured. According to army and prison officers, several inmates were castrated. It's also reported that a number of young inmates were stripped, tied to a signal bell framework and sexually assaulted. There was clearly a reign of terror, exercised by some of the inmates themselves, far worse than anything ever alleged against a Canadian prison administration.

This emphasizes a fact too often forgotten by sentimentalists. While a large penitentiary like Kingston undoubtedly contains some prisoners who can be rehabilitated, it also houses a population of vicious and depraved "hard-rock" convicts whose rehabilitation is a very doubtful prospect indeed.

Considering the kind of people it was dealing with, the government deserves some credit for the way it handled the situation. The rioters were inducted to surrender without a bloody battle, and the six guards held as hostages were not harmed. (In part, their deliverance may well be due to the provision of the Criminal Code which still makes the murder of a prison guard a capital offence.)

Most important, the government did not make the mistake — as some administrations in the U.S. have done — of promising concessions to the rioters to end the riot. That would have ensured similar outbreaks in other institutions.

The riot may also have an educational effect on some sections of the public, by dispersing some of the fog of Hollywood sentimentality which surrounds the subject of prisons and prisoners.

This was very much in evidence at Kingston, with young people outside the walls carrying banners with slogans such as "Support for our Brothers." Did they know what their "brothers" were doing — and might do to them if they got the chance?

By all means let us stress rehabilitation, without underrating its difficulties. But let us remember that retribution and security also have their place in the judicial and penal systems.

Canadian Arms Sales: Pure or Rich Not Issue

By JAMES EAYRS

Canada has long been disadvantaged in defence talks with the United States. "Americans tend to turn bilateral discussions into briefing sessions," one of our chaps recalls, "in which Canadians are awed into sceptical silence." The silence into which our minister of national defence was awed during his day-long briefing at the Pentagon doesn't have even the merit of scepticism.

Melvin Laird has been lying in Washington so long and so brazenly that no one believes him any more, even his own officials.

"We are still far superior to the Russians in nuclear warfare," one of these remarked not long ago, "and will be in 1975. I understand that Laird is taking the most pessimistic position because that makes the best argument with Congress if he is going to get money for the ABM and other programs."

But in Donald Macdonald the secretary found a willing suspender of disbelief, a receptive audience for his discredited "The Russians Are Coming!" assesssment of the arms race. The Soviet Union, Laird told his gullible visitor, is not simply catching up, it is overtaking the United States.

We can help regain the lead, says Laird. We can improve our anti-submarine defence. We can re-equip our ASW forces with Lockheed PC-3 Orions bought from the United States. We can by buying these aircraft reduce the American adverse balance of payments on weaponry, now swollen to $500 millions by the demands of the Vietnam war.

So we are being asked to buy weapons we don't need to be able to sell weapons for a war we don't want. The gall of such a deal fair takes your breath away.

False Alternatives

Not Pierre Trudeau's breath. The response of our Prime Minister to what is seen in Ottawa as "the arms sales-war guilt trade-off" has been to father yet another pair of false alternatives. "You can feel that the war in Viet Nam is wrong," he told anti-war demonstrators soon after he took office, "but if you think this will slow down the war in Vietnam, you are wrong. It will make you feel better, that is all it will do ... You would have pure hands, you would have white hands, you would have clean hands, but you would have empty bellies and you would be lying flat on your face and you would have a prostrate economy."

But the choice of being pure or rich is Trudeau's way of winning his debate, it is not the real choice. The real choice is whether Canadian prosperity is to be made more or less dependent upon defence production.

What a Canadian public ought now to be debating, what a Canadian government ought now to be deciding, is whether the time has come to begin disengaging from the role of sub-contractor to the Pentagon — a role we assumed in wholly different circumstances exactly three decades ago.

It was the Prime Minister of Canada in a second year of war and the president of a United States not yet gone to war who first agreed to pretend that, for defence production purposes, the border does not exist.

"It is indeed fortunate," Mackenzie King wrote on the eve of his second wartime meeting with Franklin Roosevelt, "that we so completely share each other's confidence and sympathies. There is absolutely nothing that we do not feel free to discuss with each other." That, if true, has not been true for their successors; it is far from true of Pierre Trudeau and Richard Nixon.

A memorandum from the minister of munitions and supply reminded Mackenzie King of the essential purpose of his mission. "Our main concern in financing the war," C. D. Howe had written, "is the matter of United States dollars to pay for our purchases of war materials in the United States ... The United States government can save the situation by purchasing certain war material now in production here, rather than setting up sources of production in the United States, paying American dollars for such purposes ..."

He Was Tired

Mackenzie King met with Roosevelt at the White House on April 16. 1941; he "purposely refrained from discussing financial matters, as I saw how tired he was, and did not wish to introduce this subject until we got away when we could discuss it quietly."

The Prime Minister rested a day or two at Virginia Beach while his officials worked on a shopping list, rejoining them in New York city on his way to meet again with F.D.R. at his country home at Hyde Park. The officials had proposed $200 millions worth of U.S. arms purchases in Canada; King "suggested raising the figure to $300 million."

On the early afternoon of April 20, Mackenzie King was greeted by Roosevelt at Hyde Park. A nap, a drive through the grounds, talk at the cottage, tea, more talk, dinner.

"We then went into a little study where his table was filled with papers. He sat here in his shirt sleeves and I handed him a copy of the draft. He read it over. Said he thought it was first rate but that there was only one thing he would change." The change was of no consequence.

"I confess that I was never more surprised in my life."

Mackenzie King recorded, "then when he accepted the statement as a whole without a word." The president had written on the draft in pencil: "Done by Mackenzie and F.D.R. at Hyde Park on a grand Sunday, April 20, 1941."

The Hyde Park Declaration — the product of that informal, top-level diplomacy by which both King and Roosevelt set so much store — committed Canada and the United States to the principle that "in mobilizing the resources of this continent each country should provide the other with the defence articles which it is best able to produce."

Wars have been generous to Canada, though we may not like to think so. Without their demand for our resources we would not now enjoy our enviable position among the wealthy of the world.

We have good reason to repeat the cynic's prayer "Lord grant us a good harvest and a bloody war in Europe" — amended to "Lord grant us a good harvest and a bloody war in Southeast Asia." Our prayer is granted. The war is bloody. And defence producers prosper.

Fuses for Bombs

There are limits of decency for governments as for individuals. A government which promotes export of fuses for bombs dropped on the innocents of Indo-China has long since passed those limits.

Prime Minister Trudeau told his hecklers to remember that "one of the things in politics is that it is not just feeling." A typical Trudeau aphorism — no more than a platitude on its night out.

More to the point to remember that politics is not just feeling either. Even his government's white paper remembers: "The most appropriate foreign policy for the immediate future will be the one which gives Canadians satisfaction and self-respect about their distinct identity, about the values their country stands for ..."

Exactly. The time to begin phasing out defence production, to place a moratorium on the merchandising of death, is now. It would be an even grander spring Sunday than that one 30 years ago.

Words to Take to the Loan Office

By RUSSELL BAKER

There will be no ribaldry or callous jest today. Taxation is too solemn a subject for the mouthings of fools. Rather, with deference and respect, we give over this space today to those great minds which have expressed themselves on taxation down through history in terms worthy to be chiseled in marble or hung in embroidery over horsehair sofas. Thus:

William Shakespeare—"Each of us owes his government a fleece, and he who yields it today is quits for tomorrow, at least until the Post Office improves its service so well that the government can deliver your penalty notice in tomorrow morning's mail."

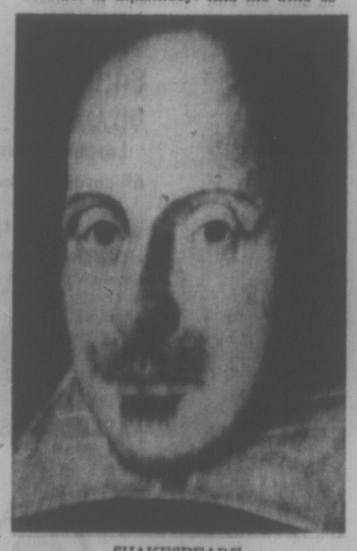
Thomas Jefferson—"We hold this truth to be self-evident; that the oil men are created with certain inalienable rights, and that among these are money, money and more money, as well as a loophole in which to preserve it."

Julius Caesar—"I came, I saw, I conquered, but the government's tax agents seized most of my purse before I could walk from the ring to my dressing room."

★ ★ ★

Louis XIV—"I have often been asked why so much of my wealth is poured into the construction of Versailles. What a poor understanding such questions show of the principles of taxation! By taking a fast depreciation on each year's construction, I have been able to shelter enough income from the tax collector to maintain my mistresses in a style appropriate to my royal station in life. I am told that this principle is not unheard of in the United States, and that this admixture of capital and carnal lust accounts for the many vast constructions there which far exceed Versailles, if not in grandiosity, at least in impoverishment of taste."

Benjamin Franklin—"Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy and wise, but to become wealthy, or at least to protect some reasonable share of wealth from a government ever desirous of the poorest wretch's meager currency, I recommend mounting a multiplicity of endeavours. If, for example, a man goes into the electrical science business and uses the roof of his house to conduct experiments with kites in electrical storms, a deduction of a percentage of the house's maintenance costs may be justified on ground that business is conducted on its roof. A print shop in the basement would increase one's deductions, and they would be increased ever further by using the first floor as a political office, the second floor as an office for the conduct of diplomacy. And the attic as an office where a man might work at writing such saleable materials as an autobiography or an almanac. A genius can avoid impoverishment under the tax code; indeed, the tax code may force a man to become a genius to avoid penury."



SHAKESPEARE
. . . yielding fleece

Niccolo Machiavelli—"The prince must be aware that there is scant compensation to be had for his cunning labors if he agrees to receive payment solely in salary. Let him, instead, reject great sums of salary income (taxable at ridiculous rates) and tell the people that he will be content if they but supply him with the modest wherewithal to do his duty to the state. Such wherewithal as helicopters, four-motored jet aircraft, international communications facilities, limousines and sea-going craft, as well as sumptuous banquets in the city's most overpriced restaurants, may thus insure such comfort and pleasure as no man can attain if he be so foolish as to accept taxable income in their lieu."

★ ★ ★

Abraham Lincoln—"It takes no skill to pluck a goose; the trick is to strip him down to the goose flesh without provoking a quack."

Heinrich Himmler—"You ralice, of course, dot ve half vays of makink you pay?"

Ivan the Terrible—"Is a man not a taxpayer? If you bleed him, will he not pay more? If you kick him, will he not turn over the key to his safe deposit box? If you seize his property and attach his salary and auction his car, or even merely threaten him with such things, will he not, next year, on the 15th of April, be less greedy to retain the debatable dollar for himself?"

The Marquis de Sade—"Taxes will never be as much fun as a cat-'o-nine-tails."

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

CPI

Higher earnings are reported from oil, gas and other natural resources in the first quarter reported by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd.

Earnings rose $1 million from the last quarter of 1970 to $8.1 million (13 cents a share), but are down from $12.5 million (22 cents) a year ago.

Operations produced $1.2 million less, a total of $6.3 million. While hotel and restaurant income was better, timberland, real estate and investment income was off.

Boeing

The Boeing Co. reports a $1 million increase in earnings for the first quarter of 1971 over the first three months of 1970.

William M. Allen, chairman, said the firm had net earnings of $7.18 million (33 cents a share) this year, compared with $6.18 million (29 cents) in the period last year.

Boeing's sales in the first quarter of this year totalled $857.96 million compared with $809.45 million last year.

PWA

Pacific Western Airlines showed a first quarter profit for the first time this year, the annual meeting was told.

Revenue went up 14.6 per cent of $10.24 million, resulting in before-tax net earnings of $193,000. A year ago, on revenue of $8.96 million, PWA had a net loss of $354,000 in the three months.

Traffic growth in encouraging, said president Donald Watson, and the new Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle service has proven popular.

W. Electronics

Western Electronics and Engineerings Ltd. earned $517,449 or 20 cents a share during 1970, an increase from $109,082 (five cents) the year previous.

Gross revenue was $15.88 million compared with $7.4 million.

The increase was attributed to acquisition of Northern Geophysical Ltd., North West Commercial Sales Ltd. and Northland Commercial Sales Ltd.

Reitman's

Reitman's (Canada) Ltd. reports record net earnings of $2.15 million or $2.02 a share for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, up from $2 million or $1.99 a year earlier.

Sales climbed 8 per cent to a record $50.95 million from $47 million the previous year.

CPI Names Sinclair As Chairman

MONTREAL — Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. Monday elected Ian D. Sinclair, president of Canadian Pacific Railway, as chairman of the investment subsidiary.

He was previously vice-president and N. R. Crump, who remains a director and member of the executive committee, was chairman.

Duff Roblin, former Manitoba premier, was re-elected president of CPI.

Other officers of the company are executive vice-president H. M. Pickard and G. J. Van Den Berg. On the executive committee besides Crump are Sinclair, Roblin, W. A. Arbuckle and A. M. Campbell.

Sinclair also serves the company as its chief executive officer.

Owner Wants Fairer Base For New Tax

W. M. Jesney, president of Q-Line Plumbing and Heating Ltd., 1678 Poplar, said Monday it is unfair that businesses which operate from basements are not taxed.

He said he is being penalized because his business is not in a basement, which it used to be.

"The plumber in a basement is as much competition as me in my shop," he said.

He has advertised for all persons concerned with the assessment on which the 5 per cent tax is based to contact him.

Jesney also said he is trying to get businesses to appeal as a body and not singly. "At the court of revision you were only allowed in one at a time," he said.

DEPENDS ON SIZE

Ald. Frank Waring, chairman of the business tax study committee last year, said a basement business is not subject to business tax although this would depend to an extent on how large it became.

He pointed out that contractors pay a business licence based on the number of employees.

The business licence is deductible from the 5 per cent tax.

He said the Municipal Act does not allow the business tax to be applied to personal accommodation.

"If you started to check every basement you would have a hard job assessing the value and by the time you subtract the licence — what would you have?"

CHECK FIGURES

Waring said he has asked the assessment department to list all licence holders and the amounts they pay as well as the business tax to see if there is an unfairness.

"I'm not saying the provincial act is absolutely fair," he said, pointing out that all Saanich can do is administer the law.

This year is the first time the business tax has been levied in Saanich. It is expected to bring in about $50,000 in revenue.

At the court of revision last week, when appeals from assessed rental values were heard, 15 of 478 assessed premises filed appeals.

Of these, 11 were unchanged, although two withdrew, and four businesses had rental values reduced, including Q-Line Plumbing and Heating Ltd.

Saanich Council Cuts $5,000; Talks Staff, Budget Freeze

Saanich council took an axe but wielded it like a pair of scissors Monday night in the first of three budget-cutting sessions.

Even staff layoffs were discussed, but the first few salary budgets went through unscathed.

Numerous small cuts were made in such items as telephones, advertising, printing and stationary, equipment replacement and maintenance, transportation allowances and supplies.

'WHERE POSSIBLE'

Council approved a broad motion on its philosophy in the face of a 7.32 mill increas: All budget items will be set back to 1970 expenditure levels "where possible." Exceptions would be over items were there was no control, for example previously-agreed-to salary increases, superannuation and workmen's compensation.

With one mill worth $137,000, and with several aldermen saying three mills was the most ratepayers would accept, that would leave close to $600,000 which must be cut.

No one kept a running count of the numerous small cuts Monday night, but one estimate put it at about $5,000. Some revenue items were increased.

This year's increase in education costs, announced last week, is just over 1 mill and officials have said the $10 increase in the homeowner grant would cover this tax increase for the average property owner.

$10.3 MILLION

The municipal budget, excluding education, amounts to a provisional $10.3 million compared with an actual expenditure of $8.7 million last year.

The 7.32 provisional mill rate increase for municipal purposes breaks down to 6.14 for general requirements and 1.18 for debt.

Taxable assessment for general purposes this year is $137,408,000, an increase of only just over $5 million on the previous year, when construction activity declined sharply.

Some of the larger increases include police department, up $114,000, debenture debt, up $298,000 and contribution to capital and loan fund, up $177,000.

Welfare costs were put at $910,000 for this year, an increase of only $18,000 over last year, reflecting a decrease in the local share of welfare costs announced earlier by the provincial government. The $910,000 figure, however, is $200,000 more than was budgeted for 1970.

Also increased, by $10.05 for single-family houses connected with sewers and by $3.75 for each parcel of land in the area which will be sewered, was the annual and separate sewer levy. Reason for this is the increasing sewerage construction and its maintenance.

In comments attached to the provisional budget, deputy controller-treasurer Roy Broughton said any reductions will depend on council "as obviously this budget, in its present form, is not acceptable."

When council considered its motion to set all budget figures back to 1970 "where possible," administrator John Tribe asked if the staff is to go back to 1970 levels.

"The commitments we have should be carried out," said Ald. William Campbell, mover of the motion. "I don't have the intention of layoffs."

START LAYOFFS?

As debate circled around, Mayor Hugh Curtis brought it back with the same question: Do you maintain staff, or start layoffs.

"The motion is valid, we should hold the line on every item except commitments," replied Ald. Foster Isherwood, who is also chairman of finance committee.

"Let's cut first, then let's discuss if we need to cut bodies."

An indication of council's attitude may have been given when salaries for the assessment department were considered. They were up to $90,900 from $76,719 last year.

It was explained that this includes a new man to replace one who was promoted. Council approved the $90,900 figure.

On the other side, council at first was going to approve the same figure for firefighters clothing, $6,426, as last year, when Ald. Frank Waring, who voted against the hold-the-line motion, asked: "What are you going to dress the four new men in?"

Replied Campbell: "What do they want, tuxedos?"

It was pointed out that clothing must be supplied under the union agreement, and that council had earlier approved hiring four new men late last year. Council then agreed to the 1971 figure of $7,500.

Even the fire prevention program didn't escape council's scissors. Last year, $486.10 was spent and this year $500 was budgeted. Council reinstated last year's expenditure as this year's limit, a saving of $13.90.

Elsewhere in the three-hour meeting, Tribe said several large businesses are in arrears with taxes while payments by homeowners were abut the same. Eight per cent penalties are levied against the delinquent taxes.

Ald. Alan Newberry asked where is the efficiency shown, in dollars and cents, in last year's Kates, Peat, Marwick and Company study on administration.

Ald. Edith Gunning said an increase in efficiency didn't suggest a decrease in costs.

And Waring said he didn't see how anyone could look for a reduction when salaries go up year by year.

Newberry asked if the switch to data processing has not reduced staff.

"No," replied Tribe. "The institution of data processing will not reduce staff. But it will decelerate or perhaps put an end to increases."

Budget-cutting sessions, which are open to the public although no one attended Monday night, continue tonight and Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal hall.

Taylor Move May Save Pan-Am Baseball Team

B.C. Amateur Baseball Association president Gar Taylor of Victoria announced Monday that the provincial body would "relinquish all rights" in a dispute with the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball over the selection of a national team for the Pan-American Games in Cali, Colombia, this year.

The move followed a decision by the Canadian Pan-American Games Committee under chairman Bob Osborne to temporarily suspend baseball from the national team because of the internal feud.

This suspension might be lifted today.

Victoria Centennials formed the nucleus of the world baseball championships in Colombia last year but later the CFAB executive announced that it had rescinded a motion, passed at its 1969 meeting in Montreal, that the 1970 Canadian title winner would also form the nucleus of the Pan-Am team.

★ ★ ★

Instead, the CFAB executive announced it would name field and business managers of the club and they would select the Canadian entry. Earlier Taylor had submitted his choices to the Pan-Am committee.

A stalemate ensued and Osborne suspended baseball pending a meeting Sunday in Vancouver attended by CFAB president Bob Lacoursiere of Saskatoon and Taylor.

"Rather than risk baseball being left out of the Canadian Pan-Am Games planning, I told Osborne that the BCABA would relinquish all rights in this matter and asked him to put baseball back as part of the Canadian entry," said Taylor.

A decision favoring the reinstatement of baseball is expected today.

Meanwhile, the CFAB announced selections for the national team on Sunday which included only two members of the Canadian-champion Centennials — outfielder Gordie Strongman and right-hander George Brice.

BILL WALKER

The weekend in review, and who says that just because they beat the best team in all of hockey, the Montreal Canadiens should sweep all else before them? With Boston Bruins in the outer darkness of playoff obscurity, the Canadiens were expected to have a cake-walk to the championship. At least on the next step to the final with the Minnesota North Stars being the opposition. Minnesota who? But not so. Times have changed. Again.

In another of the surprisingly weekly turn of events, the North Stars now have jumped up as a possible upsetter themselves. Not that they are yet figured to do the impossible. But wait! When the Boston Bruins had the Habs down three games to two, who would have given the Canadiens any chance? Very few. Now, it is almost the same situation for Minnesota. The Canadiens could stumble themselves if they don't watch out. They are not the model of consistent excellence despite their win over Boston. The North Stars proved that on Sunday by skating with the Canadiens, and actually beating them at their own game. They not only skated with them, but beat them to the puck, too, something Boston couldn't do. And lest there be the quick temptation to toss aside the obvious (that Montreal should win), there still is an extra motivation for the North Stars.

For before they got to play in the semi-finals even, they lived with the thought that in threeprevious years no expansion club had ever won a playoff game from the east. Besides, hadn't Minnesota this spring been charged with attempting to juggle the western division standings so that they could wind up fourth and avoid meeting powerful Chicago in the first round. Remember that ploy? Well, by choice or otherwise, the Stars did finish fourth, and before the experts really got around to figuring out if it was worth it or not because of what was happening in the Boston-Montreal series, the Stars had sneaked in and knocked off the St. Louis Blues.

Now they have compounded the felony. Because simply by winning against Montreal they established a first. Sunday they did it again, proving at least that if a dynasty actually had tumbled at Boston, another one certainly wasn't deserving of instant status in Montreal. And on this assumption they have a chance.

However, to envision another upset of major proportions would appear foolhardy at best, and possibly nothing more than an impetuosity of the moment. But the suggestion can't hurt that there may be more fans than are willing to admit it who are secretly harboring the idle thought: "Gee, but wouldn't it be great if the North Stars could do it."

●

Meanwhile, the Chicago Black Hawks put it all together on Sunday in disposing of the New York Rangers rather handily. It was a better-than-average performance by Stan Mikita which sparked the Hawks, and at the same time gave out indications that they can win it all.

For there is the lingering suspicion here that the Rangers are a much different club when they have a lead, than when they don't enjoy this luxury. When they romp off to a one or a two-goal margin they can be awfully hard to handle. But when the tables are reversed, if they are not utterly without championship class, they can't seem to get the job done nearly as well either.

This is strictly personal, mind, but there can be no such division if manager Emile Francis is to succeed in destroying what he considers to be a myth. For it has long been evident that the Rangers have made a career out of getting beat in the big ones. It could happen again.

Then, of course, there is that continuing Coast Soccer League frenzy. Victoria United gave it a good try on Saturday against Columbus. And the fact that they were forced to accept a draw must have pleased Columbus goalkeeper Peter Greco no end. There has to be solid respect for Greco because he was the dominant figure on the field, and did more to upset United's victory plans than any other player. Not because he was forced to make that many spectacular saves. Rather, he controlled the goal area like a giant condor bird, gobbling up every ball sent his way.

Still, it was a well-played game between two evenly matched clubs. United, which went all out for the win, didn't get it because of Greco, and a sound Columbus defence. Columbus, which understandably leaned more toward at least preserving the draw result, was full value for that policy as well.

Now the fact of life is that United, to preserve a first-place finish, must win against Eintracht two weeks hence. Columbus, for its part in the United story, must lose at least one of three. In a year where anything can happen, and has, it most likely will again. So stay tuned.

Beliveau Gives Credit to Stars

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau says this is one of his most gratifying seasons—not because he is playing well, but because he is playing.

"When you reach a certain age, you never know when your legs will give way," the 39-year-old captain of the Canadiens said Monday night on the eve of the pivotal fifth game in the Stanley Cup semi-final series between the Canadiens and Minnesota North Stars.

"I am happy to have gone through the season. I still feel good. A little tired maybe, but still good."

Beliveau, like many of his team-mates, is impressed by the excellent showing of the North Stars in the series so far. Minnesota tied the best-of-seven affair Sunday night at 2-2 with a 5-2 victory in Minnesota.

"Yes, you've got to give them credit," said Beliveau. "But we knew from the beginning that we would not walk through."

"And with good reason. First judging from the way they beat St. Louis, they must be good. Not only that, they've got some good scorers in (Danny) Grant, (Jean-Paul) Parise and (Bill) Goldsworthy.

"Look at Murray Oliver. He's playing the best hockey he's ever played in his life. Also, Bobby Rousseau is playing well."

He also said the North Stars are working together as a team.

"You will notice they always have one or two men covering up. They're skating and forechecking well."

Beliveau feels the Canadiens played well in their two games at Minnesota and would have won Sunday if they capitalized on breaks.

"It could have gone either way. One thing: We are in better shape today than when we left for Minnesota.

"By winning one game there, now it's a best-of-three and we have two games at home."

Coach Al MacNeil was mum on any planned lineup changes and as he has done throughout the playoffs, declined to name his starting goaltender.

Ken Dryden, former all-American at Cornell University, has played all 11 play-off games for Montreal.

Tourney Medallists Take Opening Match

Tournament medallists Anne Thomson and Anne Shields of Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club advanced to today's quarter-finals in the Victoria City and District women's foursomes championship with a victory Monday in the first round of match play at Cedar Hill.

The Colwood pair advanced by defeating Joanne Morrison and Betty McDougall of Gorge Vale.

In other first-round matches in championship play, Marjorie Goodland and Madge Nash of Victoria defeated clubmates Juanita Wheaton and Barbara Glassford; Doreen Brunsdon and Marg Lupton of Colwood downed Edna Hicks and Betty Phillips of Uplands; Jean Wright and Jean Rimmington ousted Jane Fall of Cowichan and Evelyn Jackson of Nanaimo; Gert Pumfrey and Peggy Matthews of Gorge Vale bested Claudia Morrow and Vi Link of Victoria; Martha Merryweather and Esther Barnes of Uplands beat Clara Johnson and Bunny Yardley of Gorge; Sara Clement and Sophie Harwood of Mount Brenton outmatched Bev Berkey and Mary McAra of Cowichan and Kay Tribe and June Lovitt of Uplands swept past Evan Mackie and Betty Stoneham of Victoria.

Today's quarter-finals were scheduled at Glen Meadows and Wednesday is an off day. Semi-finals are set for Thursday at Gorge Vale with finals slated for Friday at Royal Colwood.

ARSENAL APPEAL FOR OFFSIDE CALL

While goaltender Bob Wilson starting diving attempt to stop ball kicked by Jackie Charlton of Leeds, Arsenal player in background raises arm in unsuccessful appeal for offside call against Charlton. Leeds took over first place in English League's first division Monday night, clipping Arsenal 1-0 on controversial late goal by Charlton. Angry Arsenal fans, protesting winning tally that came on offside play, invaded field in attempt to attack referee. (See story on Page 9.)

REPORTED to have resigned as general manager of St. Louis Blues, the National Hockey League's most successful expansion team, is Scotty Bowman (above). Story in Regina newspaper said Monday that Bowman resigned after dispute with club owners.

Gibson Shelled Early; Blue Scores Fifth Win

By The Associated Press

The ailing Gibson suffered his earliest knockout in four National League years Monday night. New York Mets rocked him for 10 hits and seven runs in 3 2-3 innings and routed the St. Louis Cardinals 12-2.

Blue, a hard-throwing 21-year-old southpaw, tamed the world champion Baltimore Orioles on four hits—he had a no-hitter for five innings—and Oakland Athletics made off with a 1-0 triumph on Reggie Jackson's RBI single in the sixth inning.

In the only other National League encounter, Philadelphia Phillies nipped Houston Astros 2-1 on an eighth-inning tie-breaking home run by Willie Montanez.

Elsewhere in the American, California Angels blanked Cleveland Indians 8-0, Detroit Tigers swamped Kansas City Royals 8-3 and Minnesota Twins defeated Washington Senators 7-2. Milwaukee Brewers at Boston Red Sox was rained out.

METS SCORE EARLY

The New York-St. Louis affair was billed as an early season mound classic between Gibson and Tom Seaver. But the Mets jumped on Gibson for two runs in the first inning, one in the third and four in the fourth. Ed Kranepool paced the 17-hit assult with four singles while Tommie Agee had a homer and double.

Gibson injured his left knee sliding into a base last season and has had it drained twice. But the Mets weren't about to write off the veteran fireballer, who's won 193 big league games, even though Ken Boyer, a St. Louis coach, said it was "the hardest I've ever seen him hit."

NOT GIBSON STUFF

"Everybody knows Gibson wasn't throwing Bob Gibson stuff," said Seaver.

Blue was in trouble twice against Baltimore. In the fourth, Frank Robinson reached third with one out on Sal Bando's throwing error but was out trying to score on Paul Blair's grounder and Brooks Robinson fanned.

In the ninth, Merv Rettenmund and Frank Robinson singled with one down but Blair popped up and Brooks flied out.

Francis Hints Goalie Change

CHICAGO (CP) — Emile Francis, general manager-coach of New York Rangers, says his club's strategy for its encounter tonight with Chicago Black Hawks is no big secret.

"It's simple," Francis said Monday. "We have to score more goals than Chicago does".

Tonight's contest is the fifth in the best-of-seven semi-final series between the two National Hockey League clubs. The Hawks throttled the Rangers 7-1 at New York Sunday to even the series at two games apiece. They meet again at New York Thursday.

Francis said no lineup changes for tonight's game have been made—yet.

Then, as if to hint there may be some changes, Francis added:

"I'm not saying there won't be changes. I'm saying we won't make that decision until tomorrow (Tuesday)".

Francis also said that New York's starting goaltender wouldn't be named until the club meeting.

Ed Giacomin, New York's No. 1 netminder, has been hot and cold in the series with the Hawks. In the Rangers' two wins, Giacomin allowed only two goals. But Chicago got three past him in their first win and four goals against him before he was yanked at the end of two periods Sunday.

COULD USE VILLEMURE

Francis' alternative could be to start Gilles Villemure in goal tonight. Giacomin and Villemure combined through the regular season to give New York its first Vezina Trophy since 1940.

The Black Hawks, on the other hand, have been closemouthed about the absence of left wing Gerry Pinder who failed to show at Monday's practice.

Pinder, a 13 goal scorer in his sophomore season with the Hawks, was apparently irked at not being used in Sunday's win.

His only appearance in the series was a brief turn on the ice in the third period during the second game of the series, won by the Hawks 3-0.

ONLY UNHAPPY HAWK

Bobby Hull, Chicago's high-scoring left winger, said he isn't bothered by the extra attention he's drawn from New York checkers, particularly Ranger captain Bob Nevin.

Hull, who notched 44 goals and assisted on 52 others during the regular season, picked up his first points of this series Sunday, earning assists on three goals.

"That's fine with me," Hull said. "Do you really think I care whether I get a goal or somebody else does?

Hornets Crush Wasps in Opener

Saanich Hornets, the defending champions, shot off to a great start in one of three Vancouver Island Junior Bantam Football League openers Sunday by blanking Saanich Wasps 52-0 at Braefoot Park.

In other games on the same turf, Oak Bay Maurauders crushed Oak Bay Crusaders 18-0 and Juan de Fuca Tigers topped Saanich Chargers, 14-6.

Walkover Victory Claimed by India

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India Monday claimed an uncontested victory in its Davis Cup Eastern Zone tennis tie against Pakistan.

R. K. Khanna, secretary of the All-India Lawn Tennis Association, said India obtained the walkover victory because of Pakistan's persistent refusal to play the tie on political grounds.

Kowalyk Returns To Boxla Action

Veteran defenceman Ed Kowalyk will be on Victoria Shamrocks' starting lineup for the first time in three seasons as the Irish take on Coquitlam Adanacs in their final game of the fourth annual Sid Greenwood Memorial Trophy tournament for Western Lacrosse Association clubs.

Rocks, who have lost their first two encounters in the pre-season round-robin tourney, face the final test at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Memorial Arena.

Co-coaches Bert Bertoia and Ron Jay have paired Kowalyk with Ray Beech. Other defensive combinations are Bill Spotswood and Al Unwin as well as Tom Black and Ranjit Dillon.

Attacking units will consist of Nirmal Dillon, Mike Beaulac and Frank Alexander; Tom Somner, Muzz Bryant and Charn Dhillon as well as Vern Black, Tom Churchill and Darryl Hooker.

Brian Spaven and Ken Alexander will dress as extras and Doug Thompson is expected to draw the starting assignment as goaltender. George Gover and Dave Wirtanen — the other Irish goalies — are also slated to dress.

Ivan Thompson, the star acquisition from Ontario, will be missing from the Shamrock lineup because of a pulled leg muscle and Al "Smokey" MacLean is nursing a hand injury suffered at work.

College Hockey Catching On in States

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — More over, basketball.

There is a new boy on the college sports block. He might not be a contender — at least not yet — but he is growing fast.

His name is Hockey.

Until the early 1960s, hockey on a college level was limited to a few old schools in the United States northeast and a handful of midwestern powers that usually managed to dominate post-season play.

All that is changing.

The number of college teams across the U.S. has grown to 81, say National Collegiate Athletic Association officials, and a 16-team college "club" circuit has been formed in the New York City area.

The eastern teams are again proving a potent threat to the likes of Denver, Michigan Tech and Michigan State.

No doubt new hockey teams are being formed because of student and fan interest. But budget-conscious college athletic officials admit they think they may have found a good thing and they intend to encourage it.

The five-year-old team at Wisconsin drew 105,000 spectators to 15 games this season and sold out two more playoff games.

In New York City, Fordham University's first year "club" team played Manhattan College before almost 6,000 fans in Madison Square Garden in January. That's about as many as the two draw for one of the city's oldest and hottest basketball rivalries.

And in northern New York, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute recently packed 4,500 fans into the rink for the second half of a basketball-hockey doubleheader, while only 19 showed up for the hoop contest.

Most coaches look to Canada for players.

Of the teams playing in the NCAA's University Division, only one had a majority of Americans on its roster. Michigan Tech, the coaches' number one pick, had two Americans on a squad of 25.

Of course not everyone is happy about the growth of U.S. campus hockey. Professional scouts, for instance, are having to change their traditional stalking grounds from Ontario, Quebec and beyond to the Halls of Ivy.

The talent available is highly educated too — and less willing to sign early.

Under NCAA rules, a Canadian player must choose between college hockey and Canadian Junior A competition with the understanding that choosing the latter will forever ban him from the sport in U.S. colleges.

That makes it less than likely that the player offered a college scholarship will go the traditional route into the pros.

Fewer than a dozen former college players are in the National Hockey League, but there may well be a few more soon.

By Ernie Fedoruk

Tom Ingram, recently out of Winnipeg, was not able to crack the starting field in the Times Island Open tournament. The young man's plight indicates there is a situation, within our district, which needs to be altered.

Ingram arrived in town last September. He is a 17-year-old who worked his handicap down to nine while a junior member at the Charleswood Club in Winnipeg.

He was unable to join Victoria, Uplands, Gorge Vale or Cedar Hill because of lengthy junior waiting lists. He admits he didn't try Colwood or Glen Meadows because his only method of transportation is a 10-speed.

Because of his Winnipeg records, he feels he has a bona fide handicap.

But he does not belong to a club, and therefore his entry into the Island Open was refused. The District Committee's terms of reference governing the Island Open say: "Open to amateurs who are members of an Island club and to all BCPGA-approved professionals who are attached to or are members of an Island club."

The situation is peculiar to our area because only one 18-hole course — Cedar Hill — falls into the "public course" category. Despite its public rating, Cedar Hill (nor any other club in the district) does not offer a facility for a green-fee player who wants to establish a handicap.

Ernie Brown's Golf Services in Vancouver is the solution to the handicap-establishing problem. For a small fee, Brown compiles handicaps for green-fee players.

The only way a green-fee player in Victoria can circumvent the club-attachment regulation is to cheat. He can "sign on" as a member at one of the district's nine-hole courses — most of which are members of the District Committee — and continue to pay his green fees at Cedar Hill, Gorge Vale or wherever.

Ingram charges that unattached players are penalized because they may lack either influence (to hurdle waiting lists) or finances (for membership into a private club). When you think about it, the young man does have a point.

As is his manner, 16-year-old Bob Beauchemin quietly cleared his first-round hurdle in the Times Island Open tournament Sunday at Colwood. I strongly suspect he welcomed the spotlight's shift to the marathon, 25-hole match between Lex Sutcliffe and Mike Gray and to Ken Nott's extra-hole victory over former champion Vaughan Trapp.

The tournament medallist, Beauchemin polished off clubmate Urban Allen 2 and 1. In winning, Beauchemin again stood up as a youngster who bears watching.

Those who watched and counted his strokes figure Beauchemin had an approximate medal of 72, two over par on Colwood's accuracy-demanding course. If that's the case, only Bill Wakeham scored better. Wakeham was two under in defeating Bruce Rands.

Certainly, Beauchemin doesn't seem to bow to pressure. He knocked in a few good, knee-knocking putts when a miss might have altered the complexion of his match with Allen.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Signs of Improvement

WRITERS AGREE . . . . . CHARLTON WAS OFFSIDE

Arsenal Fans Invade Field

LONDON (AP) — British sports writers charged today that Arsenal was robbed when it lost 1-0 to Leeds United Monday night in the soccer match of the season that could give Leeds the English League championship.

Centre half Jack Charlton's winning goal was scored when Charlton was yards offside, the sports writers claimed.

DOZEN ARRESTED

Thousands of fans agreed. Mobs of angry Arsenal supporters invaded the field in a near riot and police arrested a dozen of them for disorderly conduct as they tried to storm the referee.

"Arsenal were robbed," protested Desmond Hackett in The Daily Express. "Charlton scored the 85th-minute winner when he was at least six yards offside."

"A goal that will be debated for years," said The Daily Mail's Brian James, claiming Charlton was "standing two yards offside."

"Arsenal will believe forever that Charlton was yards offside. . . . That, too, is how I saw it," said Donald Saunders in The Daily Telegraph.

"Probably two or three yards offside to most of our strained eyes," said Geoffrey Green of The Times.

The outcome left Leeds one point ahead of Arsenal in the race for the championship, with only one game to play—against Nottingham Forest Saturday. Arsenal must play both against Stoke City Saturday and Tottenham Hotspur next Monday before meeting Liverpool in the English Football Association Cup final May 8.

Charlton himself protested that he was not offside when he scored—by hitting the post and then having the ball rebound, hit a player's body and slam into the goal. First reports said the ball hit Charlton's body, but Charlton and others said it hit Bob McNab, and McNab agreed.

Cowan Starts Title Defence

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Canadian Gary Cowan, the defending champion, and seven of the eight U.S. Walker Cup players in the field, survived Monday's opening round of the North and South amateur golf tournament.

The day's major upset was turned in by Ray Kimpel, 46-year-old lawyer from Urbana, Ill., who accounted for the only cup team casualty. He knocked off Wake Forest University sophomore Jim Simons of Butler, Pa., 3 and 2 with par golf.

Cowan, from Kitchener, Ont., was one over par in a 7 and 6 romp over Bill Aldridge of Raleigh, N.C., as he began defence of his crown over the 7,000-yard No. 2 course of the Pinehurst Country Club.

Five Players From Victoria On B.C. Squad

Five players from Victoria Rugby Union teams have been selected to the British Columbia representative side, provincial coach Alan Rees announced Monday.

Rees, first Vancouver Islander to coach a B.C. rep rugby side, said he has a roster of 19 all-star athletes to prepare for inter-provincial championship play at Vancouver June 12.

Players from University of Victoria Vikings, reigning provincial club champions and winners of the Northwest Pacific intercollegiate rigby conference, and Castaways comprised all Victoria selections to the all-star squad.

Ken Wilkie, an aggressive and highly mobile number eight from the Vikings, was the only forward from Victoria to be selected.

His team mates on the B.C. squad are Dave Slater at scrum half and Jim Wenman at fullback.

Rees said the primary concern in selecting a B.C. team had been for mobility.

"We'll have a very young side," he said, but final selection from among the 19 will not be made until shortly before the June 12 game against an Alberta all-star team at Brockton Oval in Stanley Park.

The zing of youth will be leavened by some battle-hardened experience, however.

Selection Committee Ignored Kats

One name missing from the roster that will surprise rugby fans is that of ex-Victoria player Jim Ryan.

Ryan, playing in Vancouver for the past few years, has enjoyed the reputation of being the deadliest winger in Canada.

Another surprise for fans will lie in the fact that no Vancouver Kats, runners-up in the B.C. club championship this year and champs for the past three years, were selected.

No Kats were asked to try for the squad, Rees said, following a running dispute between the club and the Vancouver Rugby Union.

Kats had been asked to provide players for a game between Vancouver Reps and UCLA. The club refused because of a league committment, but when the union cancelled the league match Kats still refused to provide players.

The upshot of the confrontation between club and union was that the B.C. Rugby Union supported Vancouver by not inviting Kats players to B.C. team trials.

The B.C. Reps will play in a summer league in Vancouver, Rees said, and will see action against Vancouver clubs every weekend until the interprovincial play-offs.

VICTORIA RUGBY UNION

Jim Wenman, fullback, Vikings; Tom Browne, inside, Castaways; Dave Slater, scrum-half, Vikings; Gillie Greig, fly-half, Castaways; Ken Wilkie, No. 8, Vikings.

OLD DRYDOCK TO BE NAMED

One of the oldest drydocks in North America, the 84-year-old dock at CFB, Esquimalt, will be officially named the Naden Graving Dock Saturday.

In a public ceremony which begins at 10:45 a.m., Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will name the dock in memory of the former naval establishment, now all part of CFB, Esquimalt.

The dockyard will be open to visitors at 10:15 a.m. with the guard and band taking up positions at dockside at 10:30 a.m.

The lieutenant-governor and other dignitaries will be on board the replica of the paddle steamer SS Beaver. She will enter the dock at the beginning of the ceremony, a ceremonial ribbon being cut as she enters.

After the lieutenant-governor has inspected his guard a Naden name plaque at the dock site will be dedicated and unveiled.

The ceremony completed at 11:15 a.m., the Beaver will be open to visitors for the first time this year, remaining in the dock, which was completed by the federal government under the terms of the 1884 Settlement Act.

$150,000 SETTLEMENT BY CLINIC

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — A New York man has won nearly $150,000 in a civil suit charging negligence after he underwent open heart surgery.

Court officials said the $145,328 awarded to Howard J. Corey of Danemora, N.Y., was one of the largest awards in against Surgical Associates Foundation, Inc., of Burlington.

Corey contended that he developed an infection in his breastbone after open heart surgery at Medical Centre Hospital in Burlington. The suit charged that the disease was not diagnosed and treated quickly enough.

ANTI-INFLATION POLICY

Chabot in Ottawa: Socking It to Them

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Labor Minister James Chabot of British Columbia said Monday he "really socked it" to the federal government over its anti-inflation policy when he was in Ottawa during the weekend.

He said in an interview Canada's two major problems, unemployment and inflation, were not on the agenda of a meeting of Canada's labor ministers or their representatives. However, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey included the two on the agenda at Mr. Chabot's request.

"I told the federal government they have a responsibility to inflation and unemployment because it controls the nation's fiscal monetary policies," he said. "The federal government is the major cause of our unemployment."

The 1970 B.C. labor department annual report, released recently, indicates unemployment in the province last year was the worst in at least a decade.

PUB BANS 'KEG' BOTTLE

The University of Victoria student government has banned from its pub in the Student Union Building sale of beer in the newly-introduced keg-shaped bottles marketed by Carling Breweries Ltd.

Last week the Alma Mater Society ordered the pub manager to stop handling the new bottles. Sales of the beer would only resume when Carlings returned to the standard beer bottle, the students ruled.

The Uvic students are attempting to persuade Simon Fraser and University of British Columbia student governments to follow similar patterns of action.

* * *

The difference in shape forces used-bottle depots to sort through the used containers and store them separately. Keg-shaped bottles must be shipped only to a brewery using them, while standard bottles can be shipped anywhere.

* * *

Student action was prompted by graduate student Mrs. Barbara Corry, 48 Foul Bay Road, who has conducted a running dialogue by letter with the company and the B.C. Liquor Control Board.

She has been visited by a Carlings representative.

Carlings representative Sandy Willett also met AMS president Ian McKinnon today.

The company position is that there is no factual evidence the bottles create problems.

* * *

Willett said the keg-shaped bottle does not create any re-cycling difficulties.

He said the company maintains its own depot system to ensure collection of the bottles.

"This bottle is unique to our brewery. Naturally we want the bottle back."

The keg-shaped bottle costs more to produce than the standard bottle, but it is also stronger, Willett said.

He also said Carling has been deeply involved in Canadian conservation for more than 25 years and the company felt a little "miffed" to be accused of causing potential littering.

Utilities Body Probing Seizure

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Monday the Public Utilities Commission is investigating an incident in which the RCMP seized documents from a North Vancouver funeral service company.

But Peterson denied making any commitment to the opposition parties to consider a royal commission into the entire funeral service industry in B.C.

He said he had discussed the case with PUC chairman J. F. K. English as promised in the house a few weeks ago after opposition members raised the possibility that the firm in question was being harassed.

RCMP on April 16 returned files seized from the company, First Memorial Services Ltd. of North Vancouver, which has a contract with the Memorial Society of B.C. to provide low-cost funerals.

There was no evidence to warrant charges in the case, RCMP said. Opposition MLAs in the legislature had asked Peterson to investigate the source of any complaints against the company and some called for a royal commission or other independent inquiry into the entire funeral service industry.

Peterson said Monday he made no commitment to consider such an inquiry and any recommendation for a further inquiry would have to come from the PUC.

Strachan Hits Legal Inequity

Former B.C. opposition leader Robert Strachan said Monday there isn't equality under the law in the province.

He was referring specifically to the B.C. Bar Association's action in disbarring Nanaimo lawyer Arthur William Verchere for misappropriation of trust funds.

The fact that no charges were laid against Verchere is "just another of many indications that there isn't equality under the law in this province," Strachan said in an interview.

Replacement of the money should not absolve Verchere from facing charges, he said, suggesting that a shoplifter who replaced the goods in question wouldn't be able to escape charges.

Strachan said Attorney-General Leslie Peterson should prevent professional organizations like the B.C. Bar Association from taking over the function of the law.

Manitoba Planning State-Run Insurance

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's NDP government Monday released details of the compulsory, state-run automobile insurance plan under which the province's motorists will be covered effective Nov. 1.

As indicated earlier, the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp. will provide a basic package — to be known as Autopac — which will have to be purchased for all vehicles. Additional premiums will be levied on purchase of all driving licences, whether or not the purchaser owns a car.

The basic plan, tabled in the legislature by Municipal Affairs Minister Howard Pawley, is for $50,000 third-party liability including passenger hazard; $200 deductible all-perils coverage, payable on a no-fault basis; death benefits to a maximum of $10,000, dismemberment or impairment benefits up to $6,000 and medical benefits to $2,000, all on the no-fault principle; and loss-of-income payment of up to $50 a week.

Additional coverage will be available either from the government plan or through private companies, and Pawley said the government rate for this will be made available for June 1.

A government spokesman said outside the legislature it probably would cost about $20 to upgrade the public insurance to $200,000 liability and $50 deductible on the basis of lower-priced models of the Big Three U.S. manufacturers up to three years old.

Farm truck rates will be made available by May 14 and those for commercial vehicles in July.

For purposes of rates, private passenger cars are divided into nine categories related to age and class of vehicle. The bottom category is for 1959 cars or older, known as Group Zero.

They also will be rated as "pleasure" or "pleasure plus to-and-from work" with an additional charge of about $20 on the second group. This group also will include cars formerly classed as business vehicles, which account for only about five per cent of registrations.

Geographical factors also apply. Rural Manitoba drivers get the cheapest rates with Greater Winnipeg in the middle and northern Manitoba, north of the 53rd parallel, at the top.

For pleasure-plus-business, Greater Winnipeg rates not including dirver premiums run from $65 for pre-1960 models to $122 for new luxury cars; rural Manitoba from $35 to $85 and the north from $49 to $142.

Driver premiums are $7 for males and $3 for females aged 25 or over, and $22 for males and $7 for females in the 16-to-24 group.

In addition, extra driver premiums will be levied on a demerit system based on traffic offences ranging from $50 for six demerit points to $300 for 20 points or more. Highest demerits, 15 points each, are for conviction of criminal negligence or leaving the scene of an accident.

Additional unspecified surcharges may be made on review of the records of accident-prone drivers.

Winning Photos

Charlie Jennings of Vancouver captured three of 14 awards during the weekend at the annual general meeting of the Professional Photographers of British Columbia.

Jennings won in the categories of best natural color print, best industrial color, and best creative photography.

In other categories. Fred S. Schiffer of Vancouver, who took the photographs of Prime Minister Trudeau's wedding, missed the award for the best wedding photo, but picked up the award for the best group photo in natural color.

Tory Lashes Ottawa's North Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, his mukluks barely thawed out from an Alaska tour, castigated the government in the Commons Monday for dereliction of duty in both the development and protection of the north.

The House gave second reading to the Yukon minerals bill and sent it to committee for study, but not before Mr. Stanfield had used debate on the bill as a vehicle to tear into the government's northern policy.

Mr. Stanfield, who returned from Alaska late last week after studying preparations for the proposed Trans-Alaska Pipeline System, accused the government of uncaring ignorance of environmental tests and developmental initiatives that have taken place in the state.

People in Alaska and British Columbia, he said, were uncertain concerning the intentions of the Canadian government, because of the government's lack of policy.

Ministers were making conflicting statements on whether Canada intended to build an oil pipeline through the Mackenzie Valley.

"We have the government of Canada going around in circles and behaving like a windmill."

Alaska had been spending millions of dollars on vigorous studies on the effect of a pipeline, but the Canadian government had no observers there to learn from the studies.

It was clear to the Alaskans that a settlement of the native rights question was essential before any real development could go forward, and they were taking an honest approach to the solution. The Canadian government was not.

Canadian policy in the north was vague, and the government was being almost overwhelmingly callous.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien denied the government was ignoring Alaskan developments, saying "we pretty well know the situation in Alaska," with department officials visiting there regularly.

The bill which afforded the opportunity for the exchange would increase the rate of royalties the government takes from mining income in the Yukon, subject mining operations in the territory to land-use regulations that would keep them out of some areas, and require government approval to export raw minerals.

The latter provision is designed to increase the amount of processing done inside Canada.

The bill would also stipulate that mineral leases may be issued only to Canadian citizens or to companies incorporated in Canada—ensuring some degree of Canadian ownership.

That provision already is in effect in the Northwest Territories.

The opposition has criticized the bill for giving too much power to government officials and not providing for appeals to their decisions.

Mr. Chretien agreed when he introduced the bill in March that amendments should be made in committee to assure this.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) moved an amendment that would have required that a portion of all royalties from northern mineral development be put in trust as partial settlement of Indian aboriginal land claims, but it was ruled out of order.

THE WEATHER

Several record maximum temperatures for the date were established Monday with 72 at Nanaimo besting the 69 established on this date in 1965. Other locations with record readings were Terrace, Sandspit, Quesnel and Smithers. Low cloud and drizzle spreading northward along the Washington coast reached outer Vancouver Island overnight. As well cloud from a disturbance in Idaho spread into the Kootenays. Elsewhere over the province skies are generally clear but temperatures today will be slightly lower as cooler Pacific air spreads across the province. The protective ridge of high pressure offshore will persist through Wednesday but low cloud will be general over coastal areas in the morning. A weakening Pacific disturbance moving through the ridge will give rain to northern Vancouver Island and the north coast late Wednesday.

Greater Victoria: Small craft warning in effect for Juan de Fuca Strait. Today — Sunny with cloudy periods. Winds westerly 20 at times. Wednesday — Mainly cloudy. Highs today and Wednesday, near 60. Lows tonight, near 40.

Lower Mainland: Small craft warning in effect for Georgia Strait. Today — Sunny except for patches of low cloud early this morning. Wind westerly 15 this afternoon. Wednesday — Cloudy except for sunny periods through mid day. Highs today and Wednesday, in the sixties. Lows tonight, near 40.

North and West Coast: Today — Sunny inland with low cloud along the coast and occasional drizzle southern district this morning. Wind westerly 15 and gusty exposed areas. Wednesday — Cloudy. Rain northern district in the evening. Wind southerly 15. Highs today and Wednesday, mid fifties except near 70 inland. Lows tonight, 35 to 45.

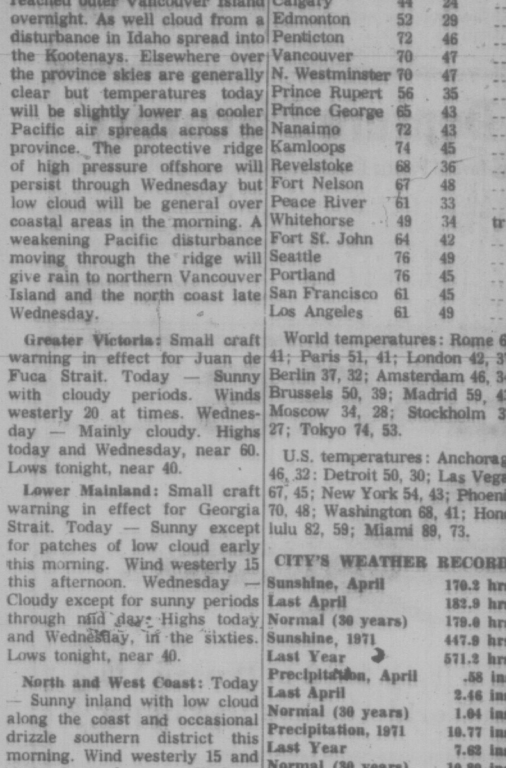
No Public Order Path Set

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner suggested Monday in the Commons that the government may not be ready to announce its course of action when the Public Order Act expires this Friday.

The act, which became law last Dec. 3, outlaws the Front de Liberation du Quebec and provides for extraordinary measures that deprive a suspect of his ordinary right to be charged within 24 hours of arrest, extending the limit to seven days.

Last week Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons that the government would make its intentions known before April 30 — the date the act expires — on whether it intends to ask Parliament for an extension of the act or whether it plans to proceed to replace it with more permanent legislation.



Fire Closes Plant

EDMONTON (CP) — An explosion and fire at a petrochemical plant Monday in Northeast Edmonton shook nearby houses and caused damage estimated by a company spokesman at about $100,000. Chemcell Ltd. spokesman Bill Flook said the plant, which employs 500 persons, was immediately closed. There were no injuries.

Lottery 'Monopoly'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government's proposed provincial lottery will stifle smaller sweepstakes or draws in outlying communities and create a government monopoly, James Bilton (PC—Swan River) told the legislature Monday. Speaking during second reading of the lotteries act, Mr. Bilton said he was not opposed to lotteries, but the bill appeared to make no provision to ensure that local lotteries would be allowed to continue.

Flooding Faced

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — Lowlands in the north part of the Sturgeon Valley north of Edmonton are facing the worst flooding in several years, a spokesman for the Alberta water resources department said Monday. In the most severely flooded area, water has covered several hundred acres north of Namao. The spokesman said the high levels will remain "for a few days yet."

To Step Down

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — University of Lethbridge president Sam Smith said Monday he will not stand for re-election when his five-year term as president expires June 30, 1972. He said there were no negative reasons for not seeking the presidency again and that he views the university's future with optimism and enthusiasm.

Before the Judge

A 16-year-old youth was sentenced to jail for six months definite and six months indeterminate Monday for seven breaking and entering offences.

Michael E. Cain, 1527 Coldharbour, had pleaded guilty to the offences — five counts of breaking, entering and theft and two of breaking and entering with intent — Friday.

Judge William Ostler said the pre-sentence report revealed that practically every program for juveniles had been used in dealing with the accused without apparent effect.

The judge said Cain was another youth "caught" by heroin and the important thing was to separate him from the drug. Ostler sentenced Cain to New Haven for young offenders.

The offences, mostly committed in March and April, involved both businesses and residences.

Cash, a tape recorder, savings bonds, credit cards and a radio were among items stolen.

A 28-year-old landscape gardener who loaded blasted rock belonging to the municipality of Saanich into his truck before he was stopped by police officers was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to attempted theft.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Jose C. Brum, 2539 Asquith, had loaded his ¾-ton truck about three-quarters full of the quarry rock about 6 p.m. April 5. The rock was located in a field.

Macintyre said the accused told the investigating officers that he wanted to build a retaining wall with the rock. The rock was valued at about $15.

Defence counsel Lloyd McKenzie said the rock was from a sewage project completed last September and was sitting on school board property.

McKenzie said his client had heard that the municipality wanted to get rid of the rock but had not checked this out.

Ivan H. Katzman, 27, of 2560 Graham, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting two tape cartridges from The Bay April 17.

The accused was observed taking the tapes, valued at $8, from the store about 4 p.m.

Axel H. Anderson, 17, of 4490 Majestic Drive, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation for one charge of breaking, entering and theft and another of breaking and entering with intent.

Anderson earlier pleaded guilty to the offences both involving a home at 754 Mount Joy.

Court was told that the accused drove with another person to the residence March 26 and waited while the other person entered and took about $60 in currency.

The money, an officer said, was used to buy drugs.

Anderson went to the same house again April 2, went inside and left when observed by a neighbor.

Ostler ordered that Anderson not associate with the other man who is to be sentenced Wednesday for several offences involving theft, breaking, entering and theft and breaking and entering with intent.

Gordon A. Souka, 18, of 4130 Hawkes, was fined $100 and placed on a six-month probation for theft under $50.

CONSTABLE CONVICTED OF ROBBING CANADIAN

HONG KONG (AP) — A police constable was convicted today of robbing the wife of Canadian Trade Commissioner Jon L. Swanson and remanded for seven days for a medical report to determine whether he is fit to be caned.

Judge W. S. Collier found Tang Chiu-keung, 23, guilty of robbing Bessie A. Swanson of a diamond ring, a watch and 50 Hong Kong dollars (about $8 Canadian) Jan. 16.

Tang had pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. Swanson testified that a car carrying three Chinese, including Tang, had bumped into her car. She stopped and while she was inspecting the damage to her car, Tang grabbed her by the neck, pulled her into his car and drove off, she added. She said her five-year-old daughter was left in her car.

One of the men in the car robbed her of her watch, diamond ring and wedding ring while Tang kept hitting her on the head, she said.

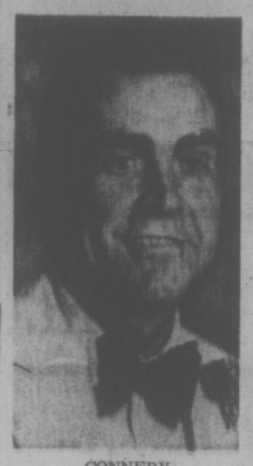
MONEY TEMPTS CONNERY

Playing Bond for Charity

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sean Connery is working again at his most famous occupation, playing James Bond. It was the money that brought him back, says Connery, but the money is not for him.

Connery said his salary for making Diamonds are Forever will go to an educational trust fund he has set up in his native Scotland.

"The people of Scotland don't believe that great things can be done there," he said in an interview between scenes being shot here. "One of the problems has been a lack of money for people with ideas to do anything."



CONNERY
. . . back at Bond

The Scottish International Educational Trust Fund will probably get more than $1 million from Connery's performance in Diamonds. He said he hopes to persuade others who have been successful after leaving Scotland to contribute to the fund.

WANT IDEAS

"We want students and other people to come to us with their ideas," he said. "We want them to do things in Scotland, not leave and go elsewhere."

The fund, as Connery described it, would contribute to anything from the endowment for a university chair to the financing of a bagpipe contest.

"I just felt I had enough of them," he said. Now he is back, but only to do one Bond film.

Also in the agreement with United Artists is a clause that says Connery can write, direct and act in two more films of his own choosing.

"I would prefer to direct," he said.

Connery is 40, still lean and tan and with only a whisper of grey in his hair. Playing James Bond is still enjoyable, he said. "It really is quite fun, you know."

A PROBLEM WITH NAMES

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — San Antonio is a city. San Antonio is a college. San Antonio also is a pretty girl. That's where the problems begin.

Alida M. San Antonio, 22, an intelligence specialist in the Women's Army Corps, has been here for more than a year now, but her name still creates confusion.

Music Man Scores

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Of the four musicals the Victoria Operatic Society has produced in the last two seasons, none has provided the same opportunities for throwing subtlety to the winds, belting out the songs and exploring choreographic ideas, as Meredith Willson's The Music Man.

It begins with a travelling salesman joke and ends with a musical joke.

In between a wheeler-dealer fake professore, Harold Hill, intent on shaking down a whole town, falls in love with, of all things, a music teaching spinster librarian named Marian Paroo.

Well, let's see what VOS directors Tony Nicholson, Howard Denike and Gini Lefever made of this zingily tuneful pice of hokum.

It opened Monday night with a good brassy blare from the McPherson pit, and, so far as conductor Denike was concerned, maintained a good tempo right through the final all-out curtain closer.

VOS is to be congratulated in the first instance, in developing some new faces and talents in leading roles.

Doug Eriksen, for example — Mr. Music Man himself — has been brought forward from the chorus of a couple of previous shows, and Mary Bissenden — Marian — also blossoms from the obscurity of small parts.

Miss Bissenden has a pleasing presence and a warm, sweet voice that has an especially fine resonance in its upper register.

The songs, Goodnight My Someone and Till There Was You, suited her and she sang them expressively.

But it is that strongly focused, consistent flow of energy that appears always to have plenty in reserve. And it is the kind that amateurs seldom possess because they lack the training to put out and conserve at the same time.

Eriksen knows what is needed and he works hard to create the dynamic, ingratiating, almost hypnotic image of Hill, which is necessary to make the story stick together.

Sometimes he succeeds and he is generally likeable but the energy falters quite frequently and at times disappears altogether.

This is not always altogether his fault. There are times when the direction upstages him badly and in the climactic scene when he is about to be shown up before the townspeople as a fraud, he is greatly disadvantaged by the blocking.

Among the virtues the show possesses most notable is the barbershop quartet (Graeme Scott, Hal Jordan, Jeremy Hine and Don Matheson), a particularly sharp character study by Robert Price, a gaggle of clever kids of whom Wayne Grimshaw is a standout, and an effective vignette by VOS longtimer, Lois Fraser.

Gini Lefever's choreography is full of ideas that are fresh and lively, but they often fail to develop lucidly to crisp and clean conclusions and the dancing, though energetic, would be improved with sharper discipline.

Sometimes they also begin without accent. A typical example was the Wells Fargo number which came on stage with a squeak instead of a holler.

City Violinist Wins Major Scholarship

He was selected by adjudicator Murray Adaskin to receive the Congress of Strings award for 1971. Worth $2,000, it is made available by the Victoria Musicians' Association, Local 247, AF of M.

The winner is sent, with all expenses paid, to attend the Congress of Strings, a six-week course at the University of California.

The competition was held Monday evening. Rigby's competitors were cellists Rolf Gilstein and Anne Valdal.

* * *

There is a notable expansion in string entries this year, especially in string groups from elementary schools. Nine first-year groups and five mixed level groups were only two of these classes judged Monday by Adaskin.

This in turn sparks solo entries by members of the groups and in under 10 and under 11 categories there was a total of 23 entries this morning.

Of special interest, too, is the whole morning Wednesday devoted to the Suzuki method of violin instruction.

Dance, accordion, brass and woodwind, bands, orchestras and other string sessions continue through the day and evenings this week.

* * *

Tonight school bands will be performing at Central Junior Secondary, school and adult choral sessions begin at Oak Bay Junior and advanced violin solo and ensemble work at Victoria Senior.

Accordion sessions end today. Instrumental and choral classes continue Wednesday with the evening session at Central devoted to British Columbia Band Championship and B.C. Centennial instrumental solo competitions. These start at 7 p.m.

Grit 'Patronage' Charged In Federal Census Hiring

By PETER McNELLY

Progressive Conservative house leader Gerald Baldwin today charged the federal government with having used "political patronage" in the selection of census commissioners.

Baldwin's statement came after the Times was told that 10 of 16 southern Vancouver Island commissioners are members of the Liberal Party.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa Baldwin told the Times he was not surprised to learn this.

"There is no question about it at all that this is political patronage. I have studied the list of commissioners throughout the country with my fellow party members and everywhere you see the names of prominent Liberals and Liberal Party supporters."

Victoria MP David Groos could not be reached this morning, but Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson said today in Ottawa he had nothing to do with selection of area commissioners.

"I haven't seen the list," Anderson said, "but the last thing I want to do is have people who are engaged in the census to be careless, unreliable people."

Anderson said "somebody asked me for someone who would be a reliable guy who would do a proper job" in organizing the census here so he named Victoria businessman Paddy Palmer.

Palmer could not be reached today.

Baldwin said no Tory MP "to my knowledge" was consulted about organization of the census in their constituencies.

He said his party is concerned that no competition was held for these jobs. This means, he said, that there is no guarantee that the best qualified people were picked.

Liberal MP says matter passed from his hands

In British Columbia, 197 commissioners have been appointed. Each will receive $1,932 for about three months' work. They are responsible for training and supervision of interviewers. In Greater Victoria, 400 interviewers have been hired. They will earn about $200 for about three weeks' work.

The interviewers were chosen by the commissioners. Regional bureau of statistics director in Vancouver Robert Kincaid said two weeks ago that people could apply for interviewer jobs once the commissioners' names were released.

But when the names were published in the Times last week, it was learned that all the interviewer jobs had been filled. Canada Manpower in Victoria had a list of 50 people waiting to apply for these jobs, and other residents had called the Times asking how they also could apply.

When asked whether he felt patronage existed in appointment of the commissioners, Anderson said, "Well, I'm not too enchanted about it one way or the other. The normal door-to-door force who have done some work before are usually the kind of people who have an interest in politics."

Asked how it happened that his sister-in-law Mrs. Malcolm Anderson was appointed a commissioner, Anderson repeated that he had neither seen the list nor had anything to do with the selection.

The commissioners were appointed by the cabinet early in April. When their names were given to the Commons two weeks ago, Baldwin said his party raised the patronage and qualifications issues.

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin was responsible for answering questions about the census. Baldwin said Pepin "only smiled" when asked about the preponderance of Liberal commissioners.

This has damaged the government's credibility on their argument that information-gathering is non-political, Baldwin said, because of another issue on whether the RCMP have put some MPs under surveillance.

Baldwin said Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer has neither confirmed nor denied this. As a result, Baldwin said, the Conservatives have no option but to be concerned about the government's motives in asking personal questions to citizens on the census forms.

"All the people who are not Liberals are going to be very leery about giving personal information to the Liberal census. These are very sensitive areas of relations of the government to the people."

Anderson agreed that the census has become a sensitive matter, but he said it would be unfortunate if citizens took the attitude that the government was snooping on their private lives.

Baldwin admitted that patronage is nothing new, and he said he was certain that some Conservatives favored members of their own party during the Diefenbaker years.

MPs' PAY RAISE LABELLED 'SICKENING'

Reaction today to proposed pay increases for federal MPs ranged from approval to disgust, while Victoria member David Anderson regarded it as "mostly an annoyance."

Anderson, a Liberal, said he was busy working against oil pollution dangers, and regretted he would have to take time to deal with an expected flood of protests over the increases.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Monday MPs would get $26,000, retroactive to Oct. 1. Comparable raises are proposed for senators, judges and senior civil servants.

"I don't need the dough," Anderson said. "I have no wife, no children, don't maintain two homes. I ride a bike in Ottawa and keep a 10-year-old car in Victoria.

Anderson said he couldn't judge the needs of other MPs, and noted that the increase was only half the amount recommended by the Beaupre commission of inquiry into government salaries.

"Sickening," Olszewski said. "Not one of them is worth that much.

"They vote themselves a 33 per cent increase, they vote 45 cents a month for old age pensioners, and they vote no increase at all in allowances for people on welfare.

"A welfare family is expected to live on $4,200 a year, and the MPs said they can't live on $18,000 because they have to maintain two homes. Well, they knew they would have to do that before they went into politics."

Silver Threads director Catherine Horne said pensioners "would not be too pleased, when they consider the difference between their increase and the one the MPs are getting."

Inflation has caught people on fixed income in a cyclical bind, she said.

"They're all right at the moment, and they can dive a little for two or three months. Then inflation will catch up with the increase and we're right back to Square One."

MLA John Tisdalle said some raise was justified, but suggested it should have been a smaller one effected over a number of years.

"It's hard for the taxpayer to stomach but people in government have got to live with inflation as well as he does. An increase half this size — $4,000 — spread over a number of years would have been fine."

He said MPs and MLAs have been working too long for too little, dating back to post-war feelings that serving as an elected representative should be an "honorary" function.

"Nobody goes to war for the love of it any more, and that's what politics is, a substitute for civil war. I've got the battle scars to prove it.

"I made $1,000 a month as a real estate salesman. Any good salesman should be able to double the wages I'm making now."

Although most Liberal and Conservative MPs are expected to go along with the increases, at least one Tory has plans to change the ground rules.

J. C. MacRae (PC—York-Sudbury) is considering an amendment to the salary legislation which would give each member the option of accepting all or part of the increase as he saw fit.

MacRae also would make the prospective MP's statement of how much money he would be willing to do the job for a part of his election campaign platform.

MLA Scott Wallace supported the raises as necessary to attract and keep the qualified men needed for government.

With electricians making $12,000 a year, Wallace said he did not consider $26,000 for a federal MP out of line.

'EMBARRASSING'

Beer Licence Eludes Council

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich municipality is holding a beer-and-wine dining room licence for its new clubhouse at Cedar Hill golf course although council never considered the matter.

"This is quite true and a little embarrassing, to be quite honest," Ald. William Noel, chairman of the management committee, said today.

"It should have gone before council."

Mayor Hugh Curtis, a member of the committee, was out of town and unavailable for comment this morning.

But Acting Mayor, Ald. Leslie Passmore, the third member of the committee, said the dining room licence had not come before council. It was a committee decision, he added.

"I went along with it because all golf courses have licences and they are a revenue producer," he said.

Noel said the committee asked a municipal official to see what the requirements are for a licence "and the first thing it was on us."

* * *

The issue will be brought before the next council meeting by Ald. Foster Isherwood, who has requested this and also asked for a full report.

He said there should be a full public discussion by council on the serving of wine and beer with meals on municipal property.

A decision should be made "on the part of the municipality that is not open to challenge at a later date," he said.

"I don't think if we search the council or committee minutes we will find the approval," he said.

"I am not speaking for or against, but it is a decision for council."

Asked specifically if he is for or against the dining room licence, Isherwood said he will make this known at council.

"I am anxious that it be discussed by council," he said.

Noel said he thinks Isherwood "had a right to be annoyed" because, in retrospect, it should have gone before council first.

Skylarks' Future Brightening

The University of Victoria is confident it can keep skylarks on the campus although the birds will never be as numerous as they were before the development of the university.

There are four pairs of skylarks there this spring compared with 60 nesting in the Gordon Head area in 1960, Dr. Jeremy Tatum of the physics department said today.

Tatum is head of a bird study committee appointed by president Bruce Partridge to study the effect of university growth on skylarks and to see if the birds can be kept on the campus.

He said two pairs of skylarks were found nesting in the field beside the Cornett building, one behind the student Union Building and another in the vicinity of the radio station tower.

THIS MORNING, FULL OF happy springtime thoughts, I put in at one of our downtown multi-marts to enquire about shingle stain. The scene was an usual: an ocean of merchandise, sparsely islanded by check-out depots, with here and there at widely-separated intervals, a clerk.

The paint department was unpeopled except for would-be shoppers who cruised about in search of someone to wait on them.

She was a nice kid, and did her best to be helpful. But she knew even less about shingle stain than I did, and we failed to achieve a meeting of minds.

With 20 minutes shot to no purpose, I lit out for a paint store. Before you could say "ranch red", a fellow who knew his wares was producing color charts, answering questions, and supplying useful advice.

The experience was refreshing. It also bolstered a deepening conviction that the benefits of self-service are offset by the disadvantages.

These range from the prevalence of shoplifting, which the under-staffed store invites and for which the consumer pays, to the annoyance over time wasted that may send that same frustrated shopper elsewhere.

Preferably to a store that hires sufficient people to conduct its business.

The departed Queenie is to rate a memorial plaque in the paddock where she spent her retirement, and that's as it should be.

She was a much-loved horse. She had friends of all ages. Beacon Hill park, where she served during her working years, lost a worthy attraction when Queenie died last fall.

In a machine age which has seen the well-shod hoof of Clydesdale and Percheron largely replaced by the lugged tractor line, she maintained a dauntless equinity.

Roly-poly she may have become, but to children both resident and tourist, she was the definitive Horse.

Queenie can't be restored, but she could be replaced. This is precisely what happened in another city (Toronto? London? Maybe some reader remembers) when a park horse dear to children crunched its last carrot.

A subscription was started. Kids poured pennies, nickels and dimes into it, for a total that not only bought another horse but provided a long-term supply of fodder.

I'm not out to start a similar subscription here. But perhaps someone who agrees that Beacon Hill should have a horse to carry on where Queenie left off might care to explore the notion.

Letter here from Mary Anne, the West Coast girl who needed a typewriter and, thanks to a generous Victoria donor is now well-equipped for the B.C. government correspondence course on which she'll presently be launched.

Mary Anne wonders "whether it's right for anyone to feel as happy" as she does over the machine shipped to her home cove with an added gift of typing supplies paid for by other well-wishers. She also makes it plain that the illness which has haunted most of her 18 years has failed to dampen her ambitions.

"I'm still going strong on my studies," she writes, "and if I can get in, I plan to do upgrading in Victoria this coming September."

A further hope when she finishes Grade 12, she wants to learn how to pilot a float plane. Then she means to seek work in an office.

The difficulties are mountainous. But Mary Anne has persistence and courage going for her. Somehow, I expect she'll make it.

Birds Claimed By Oil Slick

About 5,000 gallons of light diesel oil were accidentally pumped into the harbor at Anacortes early Monday but almost all of it had evaporated by today.

The oil was being loaded into a barge from a Texaco refinery but for several hours during the night was leaking into the water from a faulty valve coupling.

* * *

The trouble was spotted about 2:30 a.m. Monday. By daylight a thin slick lay over the harbor and into adjacent Fidalgo Bay. It was later reported about a hundred yards wide by six miles long.

The oil also moved out into the mile-wide Guemes Channel, which separates Anacortes from Guemes Island to the north.

Anacortes lies at the north end of Fidalgo Island, about 35 miles east of Victoria on the far side of the San Juan Islands.

Greatest threat appeared to be to birds, migrating up the coast at this time of year. Twenty-two dead birds have been recovered and another 100 are being treated at an emergency station nearby, a spokesman for the towboat company involved said from Seattle this morning.

Barry Paulsen, administrative engineer with Puget Sound Tug and Barge Company, said only the early concentrations of oil in the channel appeared to hit the birds. The company moved oil-pickup equipment into the area early Monday and later in the day flew in supplies for the operation attempting to save the oiled birds.

* * *

While there appeared to be no threat to the Victoria area from the oil, Dave Beeching, manager of the local SPCA office, said his organization is ready any time to set up a bird rescue station.

A Daily Weigh-In Can Be Discouraging

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

I think the following thought will reinforce your willpower, f it is deserting you, and will therefore be helpful to you who are following my Beauty Improvement Plan for a loss of 15 to 20 pounds in eight weeks' time. It will also come to the aid of those of you who are finding it difficult to stick to your spot-reducing exercises.

Think about this! Life is made up of todays. They are all we have! Today was the tomorrow of yesterday and will be the yesterday of tomorrow. If we do not use our todays to do what we should do, plan to do or want to do, we will never accomplish anything!

This is the eighth day of Bip. Those of you who have been following it have heard a lot about how to plan a reducing diet and how to do your exercises. You also know how many pounds you should lose, how fast you should lose them, and what measurements need to be increased or decreased. You now have all of the immediately vital information. However, I think it is important to decide how often you should weigh and measure.

Usually, it is best to measure every two weeks. To measure more often may be discouraging because it takes a little while for the effects of diet and exercise to be reflected in measurements. However, if your clothes begin to feel loose and you wish to measure more frequently, no harm will be done.

How often it is best to weigh seems to be a highly individual matter. I once thought a reducer should not weigh more often than once a week. You do not lose weight every day and therefore weighing more frequently might be discouraging. However, many women have written to say that they found weighing in every day better. I have a letter before me right now from a successful reducer. She says, "The thing that helped me about your plan was the discipline of daily weighing and charting."

Do whatever is best for you. You may need the visual impact of actually seeing your weight line rise when you gain a pound or so. Regardless of how often you weigh, be sure to use the same scales each time, and either weigh in the nude or wear the same clothes at every weighing. Clothes can make a difference of pounds. If you weigh at home, do so in the nude when you first get up in the morning.

This excercise will increase your bust measurement. Stand or sit, back straight. Bend your right elbow and raise your right arm forward, palm up. Place your left hand on top of your right hand and press down hard as you resist with your right hand. Hold for a count of eight at the point of greatest tension. Repeat twice.

TODAY'S MENUS

Lucille Ball Still Loves Lucy After 20 Years in the Role

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a flower-filled suite on the 31st floor of the Waldorf Towers. A pants-suited secretary, looking harried, darted in and out, trying to answer telephones that seemed to be ringing constantly in all rooms.

A room-service waiter arrived with a chef's salad, and Lucie Arnaz, 19, burst into the sitting room. She attacked the salad and alternately commented on newly-arrived floral arrangements and complained mildly that, because of the interview, she couldn't go shopping.

"Yes, dear," she said soothingly to her daughter, "maybe shopping tomorrow."

She walked over to the luncheon table, poured a goblet of water, fishing a couple of ice cubes from the pitcher, and returned to her chair.

VISITS NEW YORK

Miss Ball, after 19 years of playing a character named Lucy in a succession of CBS situation comedies without giving a pound or adding a perceptible wrinkle in the aging process, was on her annual whirlwind visit to New York. Then, it was back to Los Angeles for the start of her 20th season.

In the two decades that separate Lucy Ricardo of I Love Lucy From Lucy Carter of Here's Lucy, Lucille Ball has become a multimillionairess.

She converted her shares of stock in Desilu into $17 million in Gulf and Western stock when Desilu's two studios were sold in 1967.

She also reared two children to young adulthood where they now are following in their parents' show business footsteps.

I Love Lucy started on a shoestring, created partly because Lucille and her husband, Desi Arnaz, wanted to work together. Lucy and Lucille have become so interwoven in the public mind that Lucy fans fondly believe that she is also the real, off-camera Lucille Ball.

MAKES NO CHANGES

"I know that character very well," said Lucille, carefully applying fingernail polish. "I've developed her, but I've never changed her.

"Those early days were stimulating. We went in for one year, and then the sponsor wanted three, but Desi insisted on a five-year deal."

She and Desi Arnaz were divorced after 20 years of marriage, in 1960, but continued their professional relationship — although Desi withdrew from the show. Subsequently, Miss Ball bought her ex-husband's holdings in Desilu and became president of the company. Eighteen months after the divorce, she married Gary Morton, a comedian who is now producer of Here's Lucy.

I Love Lucy started when television, for most of the U.S., was still a sort of miraculous novelty. It is probable that no show today could ever elicit such response. Bridge clubs and bowling teams changed their meeting nights so they wouldn't miss Lucy's latest adventure.

Change — turning Lucy into a widow, shifting the scene to a Connecticut suburb for a while and then moving her out to California — has been superficial.

Then, as now, the challenge to the show's writers was to dream up new messes — and funny costumes — for Lucy.

Retire? Miss Ball glared, almost hostile.

"Well," she said, "not as long as people still like to watch Lucy."

Teeth Protected

BRISTOL, England (CP) — Parents who neglect their youngsters' teeth may face prosecution under a 34-year-old child protection law. Following a report that 288 out of 294 children examined at a junior school needed dental treatment, civic authorities here are considering a lawyer's suggestion to invoke the law which normally covers physical ill-treatment.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I am in doubt about the extra fabric that is required for centering and matching florals for the center back, fronts and sides. I have recently moved to Hawaii and the prints are so beautiful I don't want to ruin the effect by cutting them wrong. — Mrs. L.G.

Dear Mrs. L.G.:

When you are cutting large florals that are important enough to be centered, it is best to choose patterns with very few broken lines. Usually, the center front should be cut on the fold. Try to find patterns with only one front section rather than a three part front. This will cut down considerably on your fabric.

Generally, you will need two lenghts of your fabric, especially if your fabric is printed in a one-way design. If your pattern is not a one-way design, you can save some fabric by fitting the sections together as your pattern lay-out suggests.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Guessing Game

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago my husband had an affair with another woman. It lasted about a year. I found out about it and forgave him on the promise that he would be faithful to me from that day on.

Things have been going smoothly since then and I'm sure he is keeping his promise, but I am going out of my mind trying to figure out who the woman was. I keep thinking it was this one and that one, but I have no way of really knowing. I have begged my husband to tell me who she was. I even promised I would never say a word to her. My curiosity is killing me. My husband says he will not tell me so I should stop asking him. Don't you think he should tell me?—Still Guessing.

DEAR GUESSING: No! And if you are wise, you'll let sleeping dogs lie. (And quit guessing. There's only one thing that could be worse than guessing wrong. And that's guessing right!)

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding, or perhaps I should say my mother is planning it. It started out to be a small church wedding, but by the time my parents included all their friends and my father's business associates, it grew and grew and really got out of hand.

My biggest problem is whom I shall have for my bridesmaids. I have no sisters, but I have several cousins my age as well as some very close girl friends. My mother says I absolutely must have my fiance's two sisters. I like them, but I hardly know them, as they live in another city, and my fiance assures me that they wouldn't feel hurt if they weren't asked. He says it's my wedding and I should do as I please. I would like your opinion.—Blue Bride.

DEAR BRIDE: I can think of no occasion which should bring joy but instead creates more hard feelings than a wedding! I agree. It's your wedding and you should be allowed to do as you please. If parents would let their marrying children plan their own weddings, they would cost less and mean more.

DEAR ABBY: I noted in your column the pros and cons of going bra-less. A few weeks ago I saw a small item in the newspaper, which may help to settle the matter. It read as follows: If woman is not certain whether or not she should go bra-less, she should place a pencil under her bosom. If the pencil stays there she should wear a bra.

I would sign my name but my wife still has my pencil. —Seattle Reader.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a very attractive man I would like very much to see more often. He lives in Manhattan and I live about 60 miles out in Long Island. He doesn't own a car, but I do. He has told me he would like to date me more often, but he can't see himself taking the Long Island Railroad back to Manhattan in the wee hours of the morning after seeing me home. This I can understand.

He suggested that we enjoy the evening together in Manhattan, where he will provide suitable overnight lodging for me, and the next day he will take me home. I am 25 and he is 28. I am interested in your ideas on how this situation could ge improved. —Anxious.

DEAR ANXIOUS: If you live on Long Island and work on Long Island, you're a dead Long Island duck unless you get a job in Manhattan and live there!

STAND-IN FOR SAMANTHA

One Brush With Stardom Enough

By SALLY GLOVER

Samantha Eggar and Robert Culp star in this movie which mixes fantasy with reality and was filmed in and around Vancouver last summer.

"Nikki" didn't go through the window, but she did see directors and crewmen filming Samantha on either side of the window, then film a dummy breaking the glass. The result — Samantha thrown through the glass.

It didn't take much persuasion or time for Nikki to become a member of The Grove.

One day she was a hostess at Vancouver's honky-tonk Spaghetti Factory; the next a willing victim of a pulling, tugging and measuring session.

Nikki was scared.

"I just went for a lark after Robert Culp's stand-in came to eat at the Spaghetti Factory and said they were looking for a stand-in for Samantha. He told me to phone the studio in West Van.

"So I did . . . I was nervous as hell."

There she met Girard who was amazed at her likeness to Samantha.

Being a stand-in means just that — standing in the same position and going through the same motions as the actress or actor.

Stand-ins have the sometimes time-consuming job of being shuffled around by the lighting crew, so the actress or actor can arrive on the set with the equipment properly placed.

"If they stopped shooting Sam, I'd go right in. Sometimes she'd go for coffee, I'd step in and it felt so natural. If it were a play I'd forget the words but there you know it's business and you get it done."

When Samantha went to shoot another movie in Spain Nikki did some "pick-up shots" (those with no words), driving and walking around the lagoons of Stanley Park with Robert Culp.

Nikki wore a wig to look even more like Samantha, but she didn't have an elaborate make-up job.

"I didn't think I looked like Samantha, but everyone else did so that's what mattered. I wasn't the best stand-in either, always fooling around with the crew, but I was really yelled at for being late one day. From then on I was glued to the set."

In the burial scene in the movie, Nikki had to laugh while everyone else was in mourning. Up to that point she hadn't cared too much for Culp.

"I didn't really like Culp. He was conceited," she said. "A few days before the burial scene Pat (Culp's stand-in) and I were going through the bed scene where he improvised, of course. Samantha was late so Culp and I went through the scene. But he didn't have to do it five or six times. That was the only time I got mad. I didn't know whether to be furious or embarrassed."

A few days later her opinion of Culp changed.

"I was in that mood where nothing would make me laugh, for the burial scene and I had to laugh. I never thought anything would be so hard. I just couldn't make a laugh come out. They all sounded like phoney little 'heh-heh's.' Everybody was making faces at me when Culp ran all the way around the set (which was a fair distance) and stared at me, laughing, so he couldn't be all that bad."

Things were tense.

Because there were financial difficulties "you could see" the laughter gradually leaving the directors, the cast and the crew, Nikki said.

Although they were rumors more than fact, "you could see by the end of the four months Barnie (the director) was worried — everything was drained from him.

"Vancouver took advantage of the movie being there, prices were unreal. So, tempers got short and Pat, Culp's stand-in, and I got the brunt of it all, even though I probably deserved it."

There were days of working 18 hours.

The final filming was done at Wigwam, the end of the Deep Cove inlet. Those involved in the Grove had to travel there by barge. Culp and Eggar had a trailer each and sometimes flew in, she said.

Nikki may have been needed only once during the day, but couldn't leave until the barge was ready to take off.

There was the occasional spat with Samantha, but on the whole Nikki found her fairly easy going, more so than Culp.

There were the occasional spats, between leading actor and leading actress, but they were just that — spats, not "big scenes".

Nikki can only remember one dramantic happening on one of the more tense days. Samantha was late for the scene and didn't want it done the intended way. Culp got fed up and walked off the set saying he didn't want to work with amateurs like Samantha.

Pondering for a few moments over her experience and the people she'd met, Nikki said, "I think being a stand-in once is enough. Some people make a living of it."

The movie should be released in May or June.

Loyal Orange Lodge will hold a Centennial program Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Orange Hall, 1620 Fernwood Road. Entertainment will feature the Columbia Old-Time Orchestra. Refreshments will be served.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Salvation Army's Sunset Lodge, 952 Arm Street will hold its annual May tea Saturday. The tea will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. at the lodge and will feature a handicraft stall of items made by the residents. Miss Elizabeth Forbes will officially open the tea.

PERFECT WEATHER over the weekend meant members of the Faculty Women's Club could take their tea in the grounds surrounding the home of Uvic president Bruce Partridge. The tea, held Sunday afternoon, was in honor of Mrs. Robert T. Wallace, wife of the former acting president and dean of administration at the University of Victoria. Sophie Lewis Kept Her Cool

By JEAN SHARP

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. David Lewis stood the goldfish bowl atmosphere at the New Democratic Party leadership race with aplomb, even when the voting went into four ballots.

After the third, she said: "I'm quite calm. Maybe I'll feel it later but I'm quite calm, it's not an act.

"Win or lose, I win. If he wins, that's wonderful. If he doesn't, maybe I can have him for myself. I've been trying to for years, this man whom I adore."

The Lewises showed their usual family solidarity during the hours of tension Saturday.

Sons Stephen and Michael were helping direct the convention campaigning. Stephen is Ontario NDP leader. Daughters Janet and Nina and all the spouses were there.

Even Stephen's daughter Ilana, 5, and son Avi David, 3, were in the winner's booth, tooting toy horns in celebration and obeying their mother's instructions to "give Grandpa a good-luck kiss."

The matriarch of this political brood was raised as Sophie Garson in Montreal, in a family not particularly politically minded.

She says she knew she was marrying a politician, though. They met when they were teen-agers and married in 1935.

"From very early days I saw that this man was in the political arena. It made no difference whether it was at McGill, or in trade unions.

"I very early identified myself with it, and I was probably attracted to him because I was beginning to think along socialist lines."

Lewis, who replaces T. C. Douglas, party leader since 1961, has held several party executive posts. His wife says she has no feeling that the leadership is a belated honor for him.

"He's worked the way he wanted to work. He's always lived for the NDP.

"I know he'll always make a contribution to the NDP. He is the NDP."

Will being leader's wife change her life?

City Land Bids Fall Way Short

DUNCAN — Bids $30,000 below appraised values for three pieces of city property were rejected by city council on Monday. A second try to sell will be delayed.

At a special meeting council was offered $80,000 by the Duncan and District Credit Union for the area of the old municipal hall, old fire hall and library. Appraised value was $97,000.

Wai Sen Chow offered council $7,000 for the area of the old public work shop on Canada Avenue value at $12,000.

Ald. Allan Kerr suggested the city get out of the real estate business and try to raise the credit union's bid to $85,000 because a new structure would bring tax reversal. But Ald. Hamish Mutter advised against negotiations.

"You would be on very dangerous grounds. It could be misconstrued, he said.

Pacific Rim 'Flat' Name

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Some residents of the west coast of Vancouver Island take a dim view of the name Pacific Rim National Park which has been given to a new park area on the Pacific shore of the island.

The Alberni Valley Times Monday lampooned the name with a front-page cartoon suggesting the idea for Pacific Rim came from an inflated inner tube. And the newspaper suggested the name "sounds flat."

In an accompanying editorial, the newspaper said "dull Ottawa has staggered the people's imagination by the lack of its own," adding "it doesn't make sense that Ottawa could come up with a name like this when the park and the area in which it is located is steeped in Indian tradition and the tradition of the sea."

Leslie McKinnon, chairman of the Alberni-Clayoquot regional district, said the name Pacific Rim sounds as though two bureaucrats sat down in Ottawa over a cup of coffee and came up with the name."

McKinnon said he will bring the matter up at a regional district meeting Wednesday night and see if a protest can be made to Ottawa.

GOALIE TO APPEAR AMONG DUNE BUGGIES

CHEMAINUS — Charlie Hodge, Vancouver Canucks goalie will be featured guest at the sport-o-rama at Fuller Lake Arena at Chemainus Saturday evening.

Hodge will be on hand at 6:30 p.m. to sign autographs.

Also featured at the two-day event will be trailers, campers, boats, dune buggies, terra jets, camping supplies and many other aspects of sports, said Wayne Buck, sport-o-rama organizer.

Doos are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Indians Delay Island Walk

DUNCAN — The Vancouver Island Tribal Federation has postponed until fall its Indian walkathon which was to be held from Duncan to Victoria on Sunday. All efforts will now be concentrated on the 100-mile moccasin march at Vancouver May 14, 15 and 16.

Some of the proceeds from the mainland walkathon will be channelled into the federation at Duncan to help coordinating activities of the 19 bands, corresponding secretary Larry Seymour of Duncan said.

Seymour said the federation, which reaches from Qualicum south and includes bands on the Saanich Peninsula and Port Renfrew, coordinates educational grograms and building projects.

"There are five big houses in the process of being planned and our federation can be very helpful in procuring material at a reasonable price for all projects," he said.

100 Students Anticipated For Mill Bay Tennis Camp

The school, which will be split into two two-week sessions, will be held at the Brentwood College.

Assisting Willey, tennis pro from Phoenix, Arizona, will be Ian Laver of Australia, cousin of world tennis champion Rod Laver.

Evening lessons will also be offered for adults.

MAN, 46, CHARGED IN PUB SLAYING

NANAIMO (CP) — Ian Nichol Walker, 46, of Hendrix Lake, B.C., in the Cariboo district, was charged Monday with non-capital murder of a 30-year-old Nanaimo woman.

Gloria Muriel Norman was shot once in the chest by a man who walked into a Royal Canadian Legion bar here Saturday afternoon with a .22 calibre rifle.

The man then fired more than once at the woman's companion, Esko Karu, 25, of Nanaimo and wounded him in the face and hand. Karu is in satisfactory condition in hospital here.

Walker was also charged with attempted murder of Karu.

He was remanded to Wednesday after Crown counsel John Horn said he wanted to get a private medical opinion on the merits of ordering a 30-day psychiatric examination of Walker, who is a student at the Nanaimo Vocational Training School.

Three other persons at the same table in the bar at the time of the shooting were not injured.

Witnesses said that after the man shot the couple he handed the rifle to another patron and waited for police.

Israel Unveils Arms

TEL AVIV (AP) — In advance of its 23rd independence anniversary, Israel made public for the first time Sunday some of its new American military equipment, including amphibious artillery and a personnel carrier that could cross the Suez canal in any fresh outbreak of hostilities.

Displayed to reporters were the M-108 self-prepelled cannon, the M-113 armored personnel carrier and the Sikorsky CH-53 combat helicopter. All were shown last week but reporters were not allowed to publish their reports until Sunday night.

A Katyusha rocket launcher also was rolled out and showed how Israel had integrated Soviet war booty captured from Egypt during the 1967 war.

An Israeli military spokesman said both the artillery piece and the personnel carrier were "able to cross water obstacles of any depth."

My Lai Suspect Cleared Of Charge

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga. (AP) — A military judge directed a verdict of innocent today on a charge that Capt. Eugene M. Kotouc, 37, assaulted a suspected Viet Cong prisoner by cutting him on the neck at My Lai in 1968.

Wright directed the jury to limit its deliberations to the maiming charge.

Kotouc was expected to take the stand today and testify about the allegations that he chopped off the prisoner's finger while Capt. Ernest Medina held the man's hand down.

The incident is alleged to have occurred a few hours after the My Lai massacre and about two miles from the hamlet where civilians were gunned down.

HOME GARDEN

Shrub Cuttings Prosper Now

By HILDA BEASTALL

The last days of April are likely to bring particular pleasure to the gardener who dabbles in cuttings from the garden shrubs.

As suggested late in the summer, a large group of the hardiest outdoor shrubs may be propagated by means of cuttings taken at that time and set to root in a sheltered spot or in a covered frame.

Hilda

During winter, little change has been noticeable, but now a hopeful liveliness about some of the tips denotes a degree of root activity.

Look over this list for possible cuttings which you may be rooting by this outdoor method: aucuba, laurustinus, escallonia (some varieties), almost all the spiraeas, forsythia, philadelphus, laurels, weigela, skimmia, and a few of the easier coniferous evergreens such as juniper.

If some of your rooting mixture of fine peatmoss, sand and soil is adhering to the cutting base you will be justified in feeling excited with success.

There are doubtless short white roots emerging and the cutting is ready to be given a place of its own to grow for a full year. Don't disturb the adhering mixture.

Should the cutting come out quite bare of rooting mixture, take a good look at the base of the cutting.

Has it formed a callus? If it looks knobby and roughened, roots will probably form within another month if dampness and warmth are present. Sometimes this knobbly callus hardens to the point of preventing the emergence of roots, and we carefully scrape a little away with a thumbnail.

Before you do this however, it is best to give all callused cuttings a further chance to make roots during the next month.

Those found to be rooted now can be put into a small patch of prepared soil in dappled sun and shade to grow more roots.

A soil mixture of compost with a little sand for drainage is suitable for most. Give the newly set plants a spray of water after moving, and on hot days. Put in at nine inches apart, all the types of cuttings mentioned will make more roots and some top growth during the summer months.

A final move to the open garden can come in early spring next year for most.

Hedge material is an exception; this must be constantly pinched for two years before the plants are large enough to put along an open lot boundary.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In tournaments, experts hate to encounter "freak," distributional hands. The reason is that the bidding of this type of hand usually does not lend itself to scientific treatment; and in these circumstances, lucky guesses often bring about the arrival of optimum contracts. Hence, on a relative basis, the expert feels that he has no advantage over the non-expert; and the former's chances of winning thus diminishes.

In the freak hand presented today, which arose in the National Championships of 1970, many South players reached a slam contract in spades, via devious sequences of bidding. Quite a few failed to make it. Our actual South declarer, in bringing his slam home safely, demonstrated how expert play (rather than bidding) often wins tournaments.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

NORTH

SOUTH
♠ A K Q J 2
♡ A 8 7 6 5 3 2
♣ 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♡	2◇	Pass	2♠
Pass	3♡	Pass	4♠
Pass	5♠	Pass	6♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

When South bid two spades, North envisioned the possibility of a slam. Hence his cue bid of three hearts, to show first-round control of that suit (either a void or the ace). South, looking at the heart ace, therefore knew that North was void of hearts. When North subsequently invited South to bid the slam (by his five spade call), South accepted the invitation.

After the king of hearts had been opened, South realized that he would be unable to ruff a couple of hearts in dummy, since East would surely overruff (West having opened the bidding with one heart). He ruffed the opening lead in dummy, after which he ruffed a low diamond in his own hand. He then drew four rounds of trumps, discarding a club and a diamond from dummy. The ace of hearts was cashed next, another diamond being discarded from dummy.

The club finesse was then taken, with the virtual guarantee that it would win, since West had opened the bidding on a hand that contained no aces and, at most, two kings. The ace and king of diamonds were cashed next, South discarding two hearts. Has the six outstanding diamonds been divided 3-3, all of dummy's diamonds would now be winners.

When West failed to follow suit to the third diamond lead, a fourth diamond was led, East' jack winning. East perforce had to return a club to dummy's ace, and the board's established diamonds took the rest of the tricks.

SUBS READIED FOR ALBANIA

LONDON (AP) — The Sunday Telegraph says Mainland Chinese technicians are preparing four submarines for use by the Albanian navy in the Mediterranean.

The newspaper says the submarines are Soviet-built W-class ships left behind in Albania 10 years ago after the split between Moscow and the Albanian government.

The Sunday Telegraph says the submarines would fly the Albanian flag but probably would be largely or entirely manned by Chinese. It does not disclose the source of its information.

The defence ministry here had no comment on the report.

THE PUFF THAT HOOKS

LONDON (AP) — A British medical researcher says 70 per cent of teen-agers who smoke even a single cirarette are likely to be "hooked" for the next 40 years.

But those who reach the age of 20 without smoking are unlikely to become addicted, he claims.

Dr. M. A. Hamilton Russell of London University Institute of Psychiatry reports his findings in the British Journal of Medical Psychology.

He claims:

—Seventy-seven per cent of smokers wish to stop smoking or have tired unsuccessfully to do so, but less than one in four ever manage to break themselves of the habit permanently.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

LUNNEY — The husband and family of the late Mrs. Mae Lunney wish to thank the many kind friends and neighbours who sympathised with them in their recent bereavement; especially those who sent floral tributes, letters and cards of condolence, and all who attended the funeral. Trusting this acknowledgement will be accepted in grateful appreciation. John R. Lunney, Albert Lunney, Mrs. F. Martin.

I wish to express sincere thanks to my relatives, friends and neighbours for their kindness, floral tributes and sympathy in the loss of my dear husband Gordon. Special thanks to Dr. and Mrs. A. V. Piper, Mount St. Mary Hospital, Rev. Rae Allan, and Hayward's Funeral Home. — Charlotte Roney.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from many friends in Victoria and other cities in our sad bereavement. — Mrs. Beryl Jones and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

WARD—In loving memory of our beloved husband and father, Joseph, who passed away April 27, 1970.

Our heart still aches with sadness
And secret tears still flow;
What it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.
Each time we pass your photo
You seem to smile and say,
"Don't cry; I'm only sleeping;
We'll meet again some day."

—Remembered always by your loving wife, Vera (Mamie); sons, Ron and Joe; daughter, Catherine, and their families.

SMITH FAMILY. 6 p.m., Channel 2. No Place to Hide. Chad is investigating a possible drug problem at his son's school. A pusher is at work, and detective Smith sets out to catch the wretch.

HALLMARK THEATRE: "A Storm in Summer." 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun). This is the absorbing production that won last year's Emmy Award as the outstanding dramatic program, and a second Emmy to Peter Ustinov for his outstanding performance. It is a compelling story of a young black boy (N'Gai Dixon), who is brought from Harlem to an upstate New York village for the summer and is placed in the home of a Jewish widow who owns the local delicatessen. It is a drama of human relations, the young versus old, black and white, black and Jewish, and finally the social buffer both encounter against the affluent.

BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun.) This is the final instalment three-parter featuring Phil Silvers who continues his hilarious performance as a Washington con artist who sells the White House and just about every other major edifice to the Clampetts. Orinarily, a situation-comedy, three-parter can sag, but not with Silvers around. Even if you missed the first two parts, this finale is funny on its own.

HEE HAW. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. (Rerun.) Tonight's guests are blind musical great Ray Charles, who plays piano and sings "You Don't Know Me" and "Together Again" (with Buck Owens), and Lynda K. Lance, who offers her recent hit, "The World I Used to Know."

MOVIE OF THE WEEK. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "How Awful About Allan." (Rerun.) Three fine actors, Tony Perkins, Julie Harris and Joan Hackett give truly skillful performances in this bizarre story. Perkins psychs himself into blindness after a fire in his home kills his father and disfigures his sister. He believes he's responsible for the blaze. The chiller gets momentum when Allan (Perkins) returns home after eight months in a state hospital and encounters strange voices, mysterious accidents and torturous hallucinations. Miss Harris plays the sister and Miss Hackett is the girlfriend.

TUESDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "A Man Called Gannon." (Rerun.) At one time there was talk that a series would spin off this movie, which stars Tony Franciosa and Michael Sarrazin. Tony plays a drifter and Sarrazin a runaway who join up and sign on as ranch hands, then split to take sides in a saddle-grazing dispute between their woman boss (Judi West) and other local ranchers. It's okay film fare, especially for Western fans.

MEN AT LAW. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Where Were We, Waldo? The lawyers have a difficult client to defend . . . a hard-core unemployable who keeps being disqualified from jobs because of his criminal record.

JOHNNY CASH. 9 p.m., Channel 8. Lorne Greene, Cass Elliot and singer-songwriter Kris Kirstofferson are the guests. Greene recites Bob Rylan's The Times They Are A-Changin' and Desiderata. Johnny sings Allegheny, I Saw a Man, and with Cass, Act Naturally.

ALL IN THE FAMILY. 9:30 p.m., Channnels 7 and 12. (Rerun.) Archie (Carroll O'Connor) takes to driving a cab for extra money. He's involved in an accident and cries, "Whiplash!" He also decides that the best way to get a big cash award is to hire a Jewish lawyer.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 13: Blondie in the Dough (1947 comedy), Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake. Standard comedy in the series.

8:30, Channel 4: How Awful About Allan (1970 thriller), Anthony Perkins, Julie Harris. Story about a young man who is torn by guilt over the death of his father and as a result is psychosomatically near blindness.

9:00, Channel 5: A Man Called Gannon (1969 western), Tony Franciosa, Judi West. A rootless cowhand becomes involved in a range war after signing on with a woman rancher.

11:00, Channel 13: A Yank in Libya (1942 drama), Walter Woolf, Joan Woodbury. An American newspaper correspondent uncovers a Nazi scheme to instill an Arab uprising in this spy melodrama.

11:30, Channel 7: Female on the Beach (1955 drama), Joan Crawford, Jeff Chandler. Female falls for a mysterious man who may be out to do away with her for her money.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

In the last few years, I have read a few dozen articles on the effects of smoking marijuana, with many different opinions about the harmfulness of the drug. The impression I have gained is that marijuana is not particularly harmful to the body, and only moderately addictive.

I became particularly interested in an article in the Reader's Digest for April, 1971, by Dr. Walter X. Lehmann, who is a very able specialist in adolescent medicine. Dr. Walter Lehmann practices medicine in Wilkins, Connecticut. For years he has been interested in helping youngsters who are puzzled over the habits that seem to be taking control of them.

He says that during the last five years, he has treated at least a couple of thousand youngsters who were taking some drug, and he concludes that marijuana can cause much delay in co-ordination, a distortion of perception of time and space, an impairment of memory, as well as a failure of the ability of the person to make good judgments and decisions. Take enough of it, and marijuana can produce hallucinations.

Though it is not addictive in the sense of creating a physical need, it can cause the user to become psychologically dependent on the drug, and it can induce paranoia (a feeling that some people are plotting to cause the person harm), and other psychotic responses.

Dr. Lehmann agrees that when dealing with one of the most controversial subjects in the country today, about which reputable scientists and physicians strongly disagree, it is no wonder that parents often shy away from taking the "hard line" on marijuana with their children. They fear that if they tell their boy that something terrible will happen to him if he uses marijuana, and after he has used it for weeks or has seen his friends using it, nothing much has happened, he will disbelieve his parents' warnings against a terrible and destructive drug like heroin.

3-Mill Hike Seen For Sidney Taxes

A three-mill increase in local taxes is expected in Sidney with council scheduled to give final approval at a special meeting this Friday.

But some council members feel even the increase is insufficient to cover local needs.

Rising costs of welfare, garbage collection and construction of an $8,200 activity centre have contributed to the increase.

Ald. Norma Sealey said the budget has been pared too finely.

"We are holding the mill rate down rather than allowing for work which should be done," she said.

Ald. Wilkie Gardener agreed, saying it is "dangerous to hold the line." But he added, he could not go along with a radical increase in the mill rate this year.

Pressing needs, according to Mrs. Sealey, are a new public works yard and more money for parks and land acquisition. Tennis players, for instance, are without courts although 91 people have signed a petition for this facility.

The budget estimates expenditures at $992,490 which will, if approved, set the mill rate at 24.43. Last year expenditures were $802,880 and the mill rate 21.

Some of the figures included in the expense account are school costs of $376,270, fire protection at $19,900, public works at $54,500 and $90,710 for recreation and community services.

A deficit of $40,000 from last year is to cover reconstruction of Resthaven Drive which council undertook on a cost-sharing basis with the provincial government. But although the money was applied for, it was not given approved and Sidney had to foot the whole bill.

Council has budgeted $3,500 for parks, three times as much as last year, but Mrs. Sealy said this is not enough with the influx of people.

Canada Week Planned By Unity Organization

Charles Harwood of Montreal predicted the name change Monday when he visited here with Jocelyn Beaudoin, also of Montreal.

Harwood said the July 1 holiday must become more than a day when business owners hoist flags, concerned only "with selling hotdogs to hotdogs to tourists."

The CC, which was formed by a group of concerned Montrealers five years ago — 30 French-speaking and 30 English-speaking — expects the federal government to make the name switch this year.

CANADA WEEK

Hinging on this, the CC will hold Canada Week, beginning June 27, with the climax of the week set for July 1.

Busloads of 16 girls and boys between 14 and 16 years of age will be chosen from 12 different areas of the country. Each bus will have two leaders on board.

The aim of Canada Week, said Harwood, is to have Canadians making "visual witness" of their pride in being Canadians.

"We would like to see every municipality across Canada proclaiming the week and every community having functions or signs marking it."

OBJECTIVES

The CC does not restrict its activities to flag-waving. Formed to promote Canadian unity, a declaration it drew up in 1966 spells out some of its objectives.

They include:

- The system of taxation to be amended so that greater fiscal resources be made directly available to the provinces.
- A system of co-operative federalism to be established so that provinces have a greater and more clearly defined degree of self-determination.
- The updating of the British North America Act.

Vancouver Schools Open to Transients

VANCOUVER (CP)—Use of city schools as transient-youth hostels during the summer was given approval in principle Monday by the Vancouver school board.

The board approved a request from M. C. Colcleugh, director of the recently-formed transiency branch of the city social service department, for "the use of one or more school gymnasiums for small hostels." The vote was six-to-two in favor.

The city earlier promised responsible supervision for the proposed hostels, as well as guaranteeing the operating costs and to the schools.

Colcleugh told the board in a letter that the hostels will hold no more than 50 persons, will be open daily between 8 p.m. and 10 a.m., and will be run by "bona fide community groups such as the YMCA."

He said transients would be served food elsewhere and efforts would be made "to keep the transients in other programs during the day so that they do not use school yards or grounds as recreational areas."

GOVERNMENT ENTERS FIELD

Welfare Nursing Homes

The provincial government today made a major move into the intermediate health care field.

Two other 150-bed units will be built at Vancouver and Kamloops and a second Vancouver unit will follow soon after, Loffmark said.

The moves follow hints by Loffmark that the government would enter the intermediate care field as it has been pressured to do by the opposition parties and a number of Social Credit MLAs including Scott Wallace of Oak Bay.

Loffmark could not immediately be reached to expand on his written announcement but it was learned that the nursing care to be provided will not come under the Provincial Hospital Insurance $1 a day program.

But since the program will initially be for social assistance recipients, the cost will be borne by governments in any case.

Loffmark said the new facilities will be for persons "whose needs cannot reasonably be met in a residential boarding home but who do not need the extensive nursing and amount of medical care provided in an extended care unit."

The facilities will serve people needing nursing care and help with such activities as dressing, washing or bathing but who do not require 24-hour supervision.

"They will be persons who will be able to move about with out much assistance even though they may do this with the help of wheelchairs, canes or walkers."

Loffmark said the facilities would likely be extended to low-income groups as well as welfare recipients in the future.

The facility in Victoria will be adjacent to the Glendale hospital in Saanich. Vancouver's unit will be at the Pearson hospital and Kamloops' at the Royal Inland hospital.

Turkey Invokes Martial Law; New Violence

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Army commanders took over Istanbul, Ankara and other key areas of Turkey today as Premier Nihat Erim's government invoked martial law to clamp down on politically-inspired violence.

The martial-law provisions, covering 11 of Turkey's 67 provinces, were announced by Justice Minister Ismail Arar following a renewed wave of violence, including kidnappings and student battles with police and among themselves.

They are the widest-ranging security measures since the Second World War, giving military governors the right to declare curfews, institute personal and house searches, try offenders against martial law regulations by military court, and control radio and telephone communications.

The decisions were made by the premier four days after he warned that the full force of law and order would be invoked against organized groups seeking anarchy in the country.

Erim took office last month after the country's generals, alarmed at the deteriorating security situation, ousted Suleyman Demirel's government, threatening to take over themselves if a strong new administration was not formed.

Martial law will be effective for an initial period of one month, and can then be renewed with parliamentary approval for two more consecutive months.

Ont. 'Opting Out' Threat to Ottawa

By HAROLD GREER
Special to the Times

TORONTO — Ontario wants to opt out of federal-provincial shared cost programs and obtain the same deal in "fiscal equivalence" as the federal government has given to Quebec.

This declaration of policy was contained in unequivocal terms in Monday's budget but treasurer Darcy McKeough admitted during a budget briefing with reporters that it is not final and unconditional.

It would depend, he said, on the outcome of negotiations now under way with Ottawa on the future financing of medicare, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

"But we have not seen any indication so far that we would not be better to opt out," McKeough said.

McKeough warned that unless the financial impasse between Ottawa and the provinces can be solved, there is little hope of progress in Canadian constitutional reform. The next conference on the constitution is to be held in Victoria in June.

'OBSTACLES'

"Until there is substantial progress in tax sharing and unless the provinces achieve better financial arrangements with the federal government," he said, "I can see major obstacles in the way of aspects of the constitutional review."

McKeough and his officials were vague in their descriptions of just what changes the federal government has proposed in the current formulae for financing shared-cost programs with participating provinces.

It appears, however, that Ottawa has proposed a structure which would impose ceilings on expenditures for these programs in any given year and which would guarantee federal participation at least equal to current levels of support for the first year only.

In addition, Ottawa wants to integrate the medicare formula, which expires next year, with the hospital insurance formula.

NO CEILINGS

McKeough said Ontario does not believe ceilings can be placed on social programs which must increase with the growth in population, and that Ontario will be worse off.

McKEOUGH

BENSON

Benson Charges Blackmail

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson attacked sections of Ontario's new budget Monday, calling it "fiscal blackmail" designed to retard progress on constitutional reform.

"Blackmail is not the way to accomplish something," Benson said in an interview.

"Anyone can say they are going to stop playing if they don't get their way."

The finance minister said Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough was resorting to blackmail in threatening to block constitutional reform if Ottawa ignores Ontario's attempts to get a bigger share of tax revenue.

McKeough's budget speech Monday said Ottawa is discriminating against Ontario economically. The speech also raised the possibility that Ontario might quit shared-cost programs with the federal government.

Benson suggested if Ontario is unhappy with proposed new federal tax laws "they can go their own way, like Quebec, with a separate income tax."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett echoed Benson's disagreement with Ontario's tactics, but said he sympathizes with that province's position.

"I don't support that tactic," he said in an interview of McKeough's threat to block constitutional reform if it doesn't get a larger share of federal tax money.

"But I sympathize with Ontario ... Ontario and British Columbia are getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The premier said B.C. gets a worse deal than Ontario because Ontario gets the benefit of national tariff policy which works against the export economy of B.C.

But Ontario suffers from the "unfair advantage" being gained by Quebec by the federal government's policy of funnelling national resources into that province, Bennett said.

"I guess Ontario finally got fed up with it," Bennett said, adding that Quebec has been using the tactic of threatening to pull out of Confederation to get its way.

Trotskyists Disrupt Constitution Hearing

MONTREAL (CP) — A noisy Trotskyist group disrupted the first Montreal hearing of the parliamentary committee on the constitution for about an hour Monday night, demanding that unemployment and social problems be the topic of discussion.

Shortly after one of them displayed a sign saying "Quebec independence is not for discussion," the meeting broke up in tumult.

Their first attempt to speak was drowned out when most of the audience rose and sang O Canada, but at the end of the anthem the activitist' chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois" — Quebec for Quebecers — continued.

While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau sat by committee chairman Gil Molgat, senator from Manitoba, a throng of demonstrators, reporters, photographers and spectators milled about.

The demonstrators demanded that Michel Chartrand, a labor leader and Quebec nationalist spokesman, act as chairman and that author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon be allowed to speak.

Mr. Chartrand was not present and Vallieres and Gagnon are in jail on charges of supporting the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

GAVE OUT HANDBILLS

The demonstrators, who numbered less than a dozen, earlier distributed handbills signed by the Young Socialist League saying the Canadian constitution made them vomit.

When the demonstrators left, Mayor Drapeau said he could speak only as an individual because the constitution recognizes only the federal and provincial levels of government.

He did say in reply to a question, however, that in any new constition municipalities should be the responsibility of only one level of senior government, and that he preferred the provincial level.

The Canada Committee, an independent citizens' group said Canada's constitution must guarantee French-speaking Canadians in other provinces "the same rights heretofore accorded English-speaking Canadians in Quebec."

This included the right to education in French and access to government and court services in French.

The committee recommends reconsideration of the role of the monarchy, but not its abolition. "Let us not dispense with traditions which are not harmful to our unity," it says.

13 BRIEFS PRESENTED

Of 13 briefs from the floor, nine were presented in English, including three from immigrants to Canada. They ranged from a sarcastic presentation by a newly-graduated engineer to a whimsical expression of faith in the monarchy by a film maker.

A submission on equal rights for Indian women complained that Indian women who marry white men lose their status as Indians both for themselves and for their children.

It cited instances in which such Indian women and their children were left with no legal standing because they were never issued a "certificate of enfranchisement" which can be issued to persons who cease to be Indians under the Indian Act.

Diplomatic Break Close

The sources said India's Dacca had been virtually interned along with his officers and staff.

BLEAK FUTURE FACES JOBLESS

OTTAWA (CP)—Unemployment problems are likely to persist in Canada for at least three years, Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said today.

The head of the federal advisory agency told the Commons finance committee that the effects of government policies of the last nine months to stimulate productive activity will be slow.

Any attempt to force a quicker pace of recovery would be difficult if not impossible, he said.

For example, the recent sharp expansion of money supply by the Bank of Canada, designed to make credit spending easier, will make an impact in 1972, not this year, Smith said.

Similarly, the full impact of increased government spending would not be felt until next year.

Amchitka Growing Issue in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Rocks will slide down the cliffs into the sea, and the ground will roll like a trawler in the open ocean.

A 5,000-foot-wide crater will suddenly appear in the centre of Alaska's Amchitka Island, while deep in the island's volcanic rock the heat of the blast will create a huge cavern that will stay radioactive for a thousand years.

That will be Cannikin, a five megaton explosion planned for this fall that will be at once the largest underground atomic test in U.S. history and the focus of what promises to be one of the major rows in the United States in 1971.

The fact that Cannikin will be the first test of the warhead for the Spartan ABM will be enough to trigger the protests of the antiwar and disarmament lobbies. The fact that Cannikin will also explode with the force of a major earthquake is enough to touch off the tempers of most of the activists in today's environmental movement.

"I've never seen anything like it," said an aide to an antiwar senator last week. "Where we are looking for an issue to revive the ABM debate, and the AEC drops Cannikin in our lap. It's almost enough to enlist every ecology freak in the country."

The AEC privately promises that Cannikin will be its last big underground Alaskan test for the foreseeable future," but opponents talk as if Cannikin itself should not take place.

Most of Alaska's and Hawaii's congressional delegation and a number of congressmen from the west coast have talked of fighting Cannikin. Mainly, they fear that the test will trigger earthquakes or submarine tidal waves that might damage their states.

Somewhat typical in this response was Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D—Hawaii), who said he remembered the tidal waves that struck Hawaii in 1946 and 1960, "both of which originated in the Aleutian chain following earthquakes.

"It appears that the Atomic Energy Commission intends to conduct this test," Matsunaga said, "without releasing full information about the possibilities that it may cause a major earthquake and a resultant Tsunami (underwater tidal wave) which may

By PETER McNELLY

Progressive Conservative house leader Gerald Baldwin today charged the federal government with having used "political patronage" in the selection of census commissioners.

Baldwin's statement came after the Times was told that 10 of 16 southern Vancouver Island commissioners are members of the Liberal Party.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa Baldwin told the Times he was not surprised to learn this.

"There is no question about it at all that this is political patronage. I have studied the list of commissioners throughout the country with my fellow party members and everywhere you see the names of prominent Liberals and Liberal Party supporters."

Victoria MP David Groos could not be reached this morning, but Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson said today in Ottawa he had nothing to do with selection of area commissioners.

"I haven't seen the list," Anderson said, "but the last thing I want to do is have people who are engaged in the census to be careless, unreliable people."

Anderson said "somebody asked me for someone who would be a reliable guy who would do a proper job" in organizing the census here so he named Victoria businessman Paddy Palmer.

Palmer could not be reached today.

Baldwin said no Tory MP "to my knowledge" was consulted about organization of the census in their constituencies.

He said his party is concerned that no competition was held for these jobs. This means, he said, that there is no guarantee that the best qualified people were picked.

Liberal MP says matter passed from his hands

In British Columbia, 197 commissioners have been appointed. Each will receive $1,932 for about three months' work. They are responsible for training and supervision of interviewers. In Greater Victoria, 400 interviewers have been hired. They will earn about $200 for about three weeks' work.

The interviewers were chosen by the commissioners. Regional beureau of statistics director in Vancouver Robert Kincaid said two weeks ago that people could apply for interviewer jobs once the commissioners' names were released.

But when the names were published in the Times last week, it was learned that all the interviewer jobs had been filled. Canada Manpower in Victoria had a list of 50 people waiting to apply for these jobs, and other residents had called the Times asking how they also could apply.

When asked whether he felt patronage existed in appointment of the commissioners, Anderson said, "Well, I'm not too enchanted about it one way or the other. The normal door-to-door force who have done some work before are usually the kind of people who have an interest in politics."

Asked how it happened that his sister-in-law Mrs. Malcolm Anderson was appointed a commissioner, Anderson repeated that he had neither seen the list nor had anything to do with the selection.

The commissioners were appointed by the cabinet early in April. When their names were given to the Commons two weeks ago, Baldwin said his party raised the patronage and qualifications issues.

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin was responsible for answering questions about the census. Baldwin said Pepin "only smiled" when asked about the preponderance of Liberal commissioners.

This has damaged the government's credibility on their argument that information-gathering is non-political, Baldwin said, because of another issue on whether the RCMP have put some MPs under surveillance.

Baldwin said Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer has neither confirmed nor denied this. As a result, Baldwin said, the Conservatives have no option but to be concerned about the government's motives in asking personal questions to citizens on the census forms.

"All the people who are not Liberals are going to be very leery about giving personal information to the Liberal census. These are very sensitive areas of relations of the government to the people."

Anderson agreed that the census has become a sensitive matter, but he said it would be unfortunate if citizens took the attitude that the governmen was snooping on their private lives.

Baldwin admitted that patronage is nothing new, and he said he was certain that some Conservatives favored members of their own party during the Diefenbaker years.

'EMBARRASSING'

Beer Licence Eludes Council

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich municipality is holding a beer-and-wine dining room licence for its new clubhouse at Cedar Hill golf course although council never considered the matter.

"This is quite true and a little embarrassing, to be quite honest," Ald. William Noel, chairman of the management committee, said today.

"It should have gone before council."

Mayor Hugh Curtis, a member of the committee, was out of town and unavailable for comment this morning.

But Acting Mayor, Ald. Leslie Passmore, the third member of the committee, said the dining room licence had not come before council. It was a committee decision, he added.

"I went along with it because all golf cources have licences and they are a revenue producer," he said.

Noel said the committee asked a municipal official to see what the requirements are for a licence "and the first thing it was on us."

* * *

The issue will be brought before the next council meeting by Ald. Foster Isherwood, who has requested this and also asked for a full report.

He said there should be a full public discussion by council on the serving of wine and beer with meals on municipal property.

A decision should be made "on the part of the municipality that is not open to challenge at a later date," he said.

"I don't think if we search the council or committee minutes we will find the approval," he said.

"I am not speaking for or against, but it is a decision for council."

Asked specifically if he is for or against the dining room licence, Isherwood said he will make this known at council.

"I am anxious that it be discussed by council," he said.

Noel said he thinks Isherwood "had a right to be annoyed" because, in retrospect, it should have gone before council first.

MPs' PAY RAISE LABELLED 'SICKENING'

Anderson, a Liberal, said he was busy working against oil pollution dangers, and regretted he would have to take time to deal with an expected flood of protests over the increases.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Monday MPs would get $26,000, retroactive to Oct. 1. Comparable raises are proposed for senators, judges and senior civil servants.

"I don't need the dough," Anderson said. "I have no wife, no children, don't maintain two homes. I ride a bike in Ottawa and keep a 10-year-old car in Victoria.

Anderson said he couldn't judge the needs of other MPs, and noted that the increase was only half the amount recommended by the Beaupre commission of inquiry into government salaries.

"Sickening," Olszewski said. "Not one of them is worth that much.

"They vote themselves a 33 per cent increase, they vote 45 cents a month for old age pensioners, and they vote no increase at all in allowances for people on welfare.

"A welfare family is expected to live on $4,200 a year, and the MPs said they can't live on $18,000 because they have to maintain two homes. Well, they knew they would have to do that before they went into politics.

Silver Threads director Catherine Horne said pensioners "would not be too pleased, when they consider the difference between their increase and the one the MPs are getting."

Inflation has caught people on fixed income in a cyclical bind, she said.

"They're all right at the moment, and they can live a little for two or three months. Then inflation will catch up with the increase and we're right back to Square One."

MLA John Tisdalie said some raise was justified, but suggested it should have been a smaller one effected over a number of years.

"It's hard for the taxpayer to stomach but people in government have got to live with inflation as well as he does. An increase half this size — $4,000 — spread over a number of years would have been fine."

He said MPs and MLAs have been working too long for too little, dating back to post-war feelings that serving as an elected representative should be an "honorary" function.

"Nobody goes to war for the love of it any more, and that's what politics is, a substitute for civil war. I've got the battle scars to prove it.

"I made $1,000 a month as a real estate salesman. Any good salesman should be able to double the wages I'm making now."

Although most Liberal and Conservative MPs are expected to go along with the increases, at least one Tory has plans to change the ground rules.

J. C. MacRae (PC—York-Sudbury) is considering an amendment to the salary legislation which would give each member the option of accepting all or part of the increase as he saw fit.

MacRae also would make the prospective MP's statement of how much money he would be willing to do the job for a part of his election campaign platform.

With electricians making $12,000 a year, Wallace said he did not consider $26,000 for a federal MP out of line.

Skylarks' Future Brightening Up

The University of Victoria is confident it can keep skylarks on the campus although the birds will never be as numerous as they were before the development of the university.

There are four pairs of skylarks there this spring compared with 60 nesting in the Gordon Head area in 1960, Dr. Jeremy Tatum of the physics department said today.

Tatum is head of a bird study committee appointed by president Bruce Partridge to study the effect of university growth on skylarks and to see if the birds can be kept on the campus.

He said two pairs of skylarks were found nesting in the field beside the Cornett building, one behind the student Union Building and another in the vicinity of the radio station tower.

arthur mayse

THIS MORNING, FULL OF happy springtime thoughts, I put in at one of our downtown multi-marts to enquire about shingle stain. The scene was an usual: an ocean of merchandise, sparsely islanded by check-out depots, with here and there at widely-separated intervals, a clerk.

The paint department was unpeopled except for would-be shoppers who cruised about in search of someone to wait on them.

She was a nice kid, and did her best to be helpful. But she knew even less about shingle stain than I did, and we failed to achieve a meeting of minds.

With 20 minutes shot to no purpose, I lit out for a paint store. Before you could say "ranch red", a fellow who knew his wares was producing color charts, answering questions, and supplying useful advice.

The experience was refreshing. It also bolstered a deepening conviction that the benefits of self-service are offset by the disadvantages.

These range from the prevalence of shoplifting, which the under-staffed store invites and for which the consumer pays, to the annoyance over time wasted that may send that same frustrated shopper elsewhere.

Preferably to a store that hires sufficient people to conduct its business.

The departed Queenie is to rate a memorial plaque in the paddock where she spent her retirement, and that's as it should be.

She was a much-loved horse. She had friends of all ages. Beacon Hill park, where she served during her working years, lost a worthy attraction when Queenie died last fall.

In a machine age which has seen the well-shod hoof of Clydesdale and Percheron largely replaced by the lugged tractor tire, she maintained a dauntless equinity.

Roly-poly she may have become, but to children both resident and tourist, she was the definitive Horse.

Queenie can't be restored, but she could be replaced. This is precisely what happened in another city (Toronto? London? Maybe some reader remembers) when a park horse dear to children crunched its last carrot.

A subscription was started. Kids poured pennies, nickels and dimes into it, for a total that not only bought another horse but provided a long-term supply of fodder.

I'm not out to start a similar subscription here. But perhaps someone who agrees that Beacon Hill should have a horse to carry on where Queenie left off might care to explore the notion."

Letter here from Mary Anne, the West Coast girl who needed a typewriter and, thanks to a generous Victoria donor is now well-equipped for the B.C. government correspondence course on which she'll presently be launched.

Mary Anne wonders "whether it's right for anyone to feel as happy" as she does over the machine shipped to her home cove with an added gift of typing supplies paid for by other well-wishers. She also makes it plain that the illness which has haunted most of her 18 years has failed to dampen her ambitions.

"I'm still going strong on my studies," she writes, "and if I can get in, I plan to do upgrading in Victoria this coming September."

A further hope ... when she finishes Grade 12, she wants to learn how to pilot a float plane. Then she means to seek work in an office.

The difficulties are mountainous. But Mary Anne has persistence and courage going for her. Somehow, I expect she'll make it.

Birds Claimed By Oil Slick

About 5,000 gallons of light diesel oil were accidentally pumped into the harbor at Anacortes early Monday but almost all of it had evaporated by today. Still unknown today is the threat posed for countless thousands of sea birds currently migrating up the west coast.

The oil was being loaded into a barge from a Texaco refinery but for several hours during the night was leaking into the water from a faulty valve coupling.

The trouble was spotted about 2:30 a.m. Monday. By daylight a thin slick lay over the harbor and into adjacent Fidalgo Bay. It was later reported about a hundred yards wide by six miles long.

The oil also moved out into the mile-wide Guemes Channel, which separates Anacortes from Guemes Island to the north.

Anacortes lies at the north end of Fidalgo Island, about 35 miles east of Victoria on the far side of the San Juan Islands.

Greatest threat appeared to be to birds, migrating up the coast at this time of year. Twenty-two dead birds have been recovered and another 100 are being treated at an emergency station nearby, a spokesman for the towboat company involved said from Seattle this morning.

Barry Paulsen, administrative engineer with Puget Sound Tug and Barge Company, said only the early concentrations of oil in the channel appeared to hit the birds. The company moved oil pickup equipment into the area early Monday and later in the day flew in supplies for the operation attempting to save the oiled birds.

While there appeared to be no threat to the Victoria area from the oil, Dave Beeching, manager of the local SPCA office, said his organization is ready any time to set up a bird rescue station.

GOVERNMENT ENTERS FIELD

Welfare Nursing Homes

The provincial government today made a major move into the intermediate health care field.

Two other 150-bed units will be built at Vancouver and Kamloops and a second Vancouver unit will follow soon after, Loffmark said.

The moves follow hints by Loffmark that the government would enter the intermediate care field as it has been pressured to do by the opposition parties and a number of Social Credit MLAs including Scott Wallace of Oak Bay.

Cost of the new facilities is expected to be several million dollars but no figure was released.

Loffmark could not immediately be reached to expand on his written announcement but it was learned that the nursing care to be provided will not come under the Provincial Hospital Insurance $1 a day program.

But since the program will initially be for social assistance recipients, the cost will be borne by governments in any case.

Loffmark said the new facilities will be for persons "whose needs cannot reasonably be met in a residential boarding home but who do not need the extensive nursing and amount of medical care provided in an extended care unit."

The facilities will serve people needing nursing care and help with such activities as dressing, washing or bathing but who do not require 24-hour supervision.

"They will be persons who will be able to move about without much assistance even though they may do this with the help of wheelchairs, canes or walkers."

Loffmark said the facilities would likely be extended to low-income groups as well as welfare recipients in the future.

The facility in Victoria will be adjacent to the Glendale hospital in Saanich. Vancouver's unit will be at the Pearson hospital and Kamloops' at the Royal Inland hospital.

A competition will be opened shortly for design, planning and supply of furniture for the units.

Turkey Invokes Martial Law; New Violence

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Army commanders took over Istanbul, Ankara and other key areas of Turkey today as Premier Nihat Erim's government invoked martial law to clamp down on politically-inspired violence.

The martial-law provisions, covering 11 of Turkey's 67 provinces, were announced by Justice Minister Ismail Arar following a renewed wave of violence, including kidnappings and student battles with police and among themselves.

They are the widest-ranging security measures since the Second World War, giving military governors the right to declare curfews, institute personal and house searches, try offenders against martial law regulations by military court, and control radio and telephone communications.

The decisions were made by the premier four days after he warned that the full force of law and order would be invoked against organized groups seeking anarchy in the country.

Erim took office last month after the country's generals, alarmed at the deteriorating security situation, ousted Suleyman Demirel's government, threatening to take over themselves if a strong new administration was not formed.

Martial law will be effective for an initial period of one month, and can then be renewed with parliamentary approval for two more consecutive months.

Ont. 'Opting Out' Threat to Ottawa

By HAROLD GREER
Special to the Times

TORONTO — Ontario wants to opt out of federal-provincial shared cost programs and obtain the same deal in "fiscal equivalence" as the federal government has given to Quebec.

This declaration of policy was contained in unequivocal terms in Monday's budget but treasurer Darcy McKeough admitted during a budget briefing with reporters that it is not final and unconditional.

It would depend, he said, on the outcome of negotiations now under way with Ottawa on the future financing of medicare, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

"But we have not seen any indication so far that we would not be better to opt out," McKeough said.

McKeough warned that unless the financial impasse between Ottawa and the provinces can be solved, there is little hope of progress in Canadian constitutional reform. The next conference on the constitution is to be held in Victoria in June.

'OBSTACLES'

"Until there is substantial progress in tax sharing and unless the provinces achieve better financial arrangements with the federal government," he said, "I can see major obstacles in the way of aspects of the constitutional review."

McKeough and his officials were vague in their descriptions of just what changes the federal government has proposed in the current formula for financing shared-cost programs with participating provinces.

It appears, however, that Ottawa has proposed a structure which would impose ceilings on expenditures for these programs in any given year and which would guarantee federal participation at least equal to current levels of support for the first year only.

In addition, Ottawa wants to integrate the medicare formula, which expires next year, with the hospital insurance formula.

NO CEILINGS

McKeough said Ontario does not believe ceilings can be placed on social programs which must increase with the growth in population, and that Ontario will be worse off.

Benson Charges Blackmail

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson attacked sections of Ontario's new budget Monday, calling it "fiscal blackmail" designed to retard progress on constitutional reform.

"Blackmail is not the way to accomplish something," Benson said in an interview.

"Anyone can say they are going to stop playing if they don't get their way."

The finance minister said Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough was resorting to blackmail in threatening to block constitutional reform if Ottawa ignores Ontario's attempts to get a bigger share of tax revenue.

McKeough's budget speech Monday said Ottawa is discriminating against Ontario economically. The speech also raised the possibility that Ontario might quit shared-cost programs with the federal government.

Benson suggested if Ontario is unhappy with proposed new federal tax laws "they can go their own way, like Quebec, with a separate income tax."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett echoed Benson's disagreement with Ontario's tactics, but said he sympathizes with that province's position.

"I don't support that tactic," he said in an interview of McKeough's threat to block constitutional reform if it doesn't get a larger share of federal tax money.

"But I sympathize with Ontario ... Ontario and British Columbia are getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The premier said B.C. gets a worse deal than Ontario because Ontario gets the benefit of national tariff policy which works against the export economy of B.C.

But Ontario suffers from the "unfair advantage" being gained by Quebec by the federal government's policy of funnelling national resources into that province, Bennett said.

"I guess Ontario finally got fed up with it," Bennett said, adding that Quebec has been using the tactic of threatening to pull out of Confederation to get its way.

BLEAK FUTURE FACES JOBLESS

OTTAWA (CP)—Unemployment problems are likely to persist in Canada for at least three years, Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said today.

The head of the federal advisory agency told the Commons finance committee that the effects of government policies of the last nine months to stimulate productive activity will be slow.

Any attempt to force a quicker pace of recovery would be difficult if not impossible, he said.

For example, the recent sharp expansion of money supply by the Bank of Canada, designed to make credit spending easier, will make an impact in 1972, not this year, Smith said.

Trotskyists Disrupt Constitution Hearing

MONTREAL (CP) — A noisy Trotskyist group disrupted the first Montreal hearing of the parliamentary committee on the constitution for about an hour Monday night, demanding that unemployment and social problems be the topic of discussion.

Shortly after one of them displayed a sign saying "Quebec independence is not for discussion," the meeting broke up in tumult.

Their first attempt to speak was drowned out when most of the audience rose and sang O Canada, but at the end of the anthem the activists' chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois" — Quebec for Quebecers — continued.

While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau sat by committee chairman Gil Molgat, senator from Manitoba, a throng of demonstrators, reporters, photographers and spectators milled about.

The demonstrators demanded that Michel Chartrand, a labor leader and Quebec nationalist spokesman, act as chairman and that author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon be allowed to speak.

Mr. Chartrand was not present and Vallieres and Gagnon are in jail on charges of supporting the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

GAVE OUT HANDBILLS

The demonstrators, who numbered less than a dozen, earlier distributed handbills signed by the Young Socialist League saying the Canadian constitution made them vomit.

When the demonstrators left, Mayor Drapeau said he could speak only as an individual because the constitution recognizes only the federal and provincial levels of government.

He did say in reply to a question, however, that in any new constitution municipalities should be the responsibility of only one level of senior government, and that he preferred the provincial level.

The Canada Committee, an independent citizens' group said Canada's constitution must guarantee French-speaking Canadians in other provinces—"the same rights heretofore accorded English-speaking Canadians in Quebec."

This included the right to education in French and access to government and court services in French.

The committee recommends reconsideration of the role of the monarchy, but not its abolition. "Let us not dispense with traditions which are not harmful to our unity," it says.

13 BRIEFS PRESENTED

Of 13 briefs from the floor, nine were presented in English, including three from immigrants to Canada. They ranged from a sarcastic presentation by a newly-graduated engineer to a whimsical expression of faith in the monarchy by a film maker.

A submission on equal rights for Indian women complained that Indian women who marry white men lose their status as Indians both for themselves and for their children.

It cited instances in which such Indian women and their children were left with no legal standing because they were never issued a "certificate of enfranchisement" which can be issued to persons who cease to be Indians under the Indian Act.

Diplomatic Break Close

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India and Pakistan moved closer to a break in diplomatic ties today, exchanging increasingly acrimonious notes while official sources here charged some Indian diplomats were virtual prisoners in their homes in Pakistan.

The sources said India's deputy high commissioner in the East Pakistan capital of Dacca had been virtually interned along with his officers and staff.

ANTI-WAR, ECOLOGY LOBBIES UNITING . . .

Amchitka Growing Issue in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Rocks will slide down the cliffs into the sea, and the ground will roll like a trawler in the open ocean.

A 5,000-foot-wide crater will suddenly appear in the centre of Alaska's Amchitka Island, while deep in the island's volcanic rock the heat of the blast will create a huge cavern that will stay radioactive for a thousand years.

That will be Cannikin, a five megaton explosion planned for this fall that will be at once the largest underground atomic test in U.S. history and the focus of what promises to be one of the major rows in the United States in 1971.

The fact that Cannikin will be the first test of the warhead for the Spartan ABM will be enough to trigger the protests of the antiwar and disarmament lobbies. The fact that Cannikin will also explode with the force of a major earthquake is enough to touch off the tempers of most of the activists in today's environmental movement.

"I've never seen anything like it," said an aide to an antiwar senator last week. "Where we are looking for an issue to revive the ABM debate, and the AEC drops Cannikin in our lap. It's almost enough to enlist every ecology freak in the country."

The AEC privately promises that Cannikin will be its last big underground Alaskan test for the foreseeable future," but opponents talk as if Cannikin itself should not take place.

Most of Alaska's and Hawaii's congressional delegation and a number of congressmen from the west coast have talked of fighting Cannikin. Mainly, they fear that the test will trigger earthquakes or submarine tidal waves that might damage their states.

Somewhat typical in this response was Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D—Hawaii), who said he remembered the tidal waves that struck Hawaii in 1946 and 1960, "both of which originated in the Aleutian chain following earthquakes.

"It appears that the Atomic Energy Commission intends to conduct this test," Matsunaga said, "without releasing full information about the possibilities that it may cause a major earthquake and a resultant Tsunami (underwater tidal wave) which may

Welfare Nursing Homes

The provincial government today made a major move into the intermediate health care field.

Two other 150-bed units will be built at Vancouver and Kamloops and a second Vancouver unit will follow soon after, Loffmark said.

The moves follow hints by Loffmark that the government would enter the intermediate care field as it has been pressured to do by the opposition parties and a number of Social Credit MLAs including Scott Wallace of Oak Bay.

Cost of the new facilities is expected to be several million dollars but no figure was released.

Loffmark could not immediately be reached to expand on his written announcement but it was learned that the nursing care to be provided will not come under the Provincial Hospital Insurance $1 a day program.

But since the program will initially be for social assistance recipients, the cost will be borne by governments in any case.

Loffmark said the new facilities will be for persons "whose needs cannot reasonably be met in a residential boarding home but who do not need the extensive nursing and amount of medical care provided in an extended care unit."

The facilities will serve people needing nursing care and help with such activities as dressing, washing or bathing but who do not require 24-hour supervision.

"They will be persons who will be able to move about without much assistance even though they may do this with the help of wheelchairs, canes or walkers."

Loffmark said the facilities would likely be extended to low-income groups as well as welfare recipients in the future.

The facility in Victoria will be adjacent to the Glendale hospital in Saanich. Vancouver's unit will be at the Pearson hospital and Kamloops' at the Royal Inland hospital.

A competition will be opened shortly for design, planning and supply of furniture for the units.

Heavy Cold Hits Queen

LONDON (CP)—The Queen has been unable to shake a heavy cold and has been advised by her doctors to cancel her engagements for the remainder of the week.

However, a Buckingham Palace spokesman said today that the Queen, 43, still plans to undertake her 10-day visit to British Columbia Monday.

It was because she wanted to be in good health for that trip that she has agreed to withdraw to Sandringham until Monday for a rest and change of air.

Ont. 'Opting Out' Threat to Ottawa

By HAROLD GREER
Special to the Times

TORONTO — Ontario wants to opt out of federal-provincial shared cost programs and obtain the same deal in "fiscal equivalence" as the federal government has given to Quebec.

This declaration of policy was contained in unequivocal terms in Monday's budget but treasurer Darcy McKeough admitted during a budget briefing with reporters that it is not final and unconditional.

It would depend, he said, on the outcome of negotiations now under way with Ottawa on the future financing of medicare, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

"But we have not seen any indication so far that we would not be better to opt out," McKeough said.

McKeough warned that unless the financial impasse between Ottawa and the provinces can be solved, there is little hope of progress in Canadian constitutional reform. The next conference on the constitution is to be held in Victoria in June.

'OBSTACLES'

"Until there is substantial progress in tax sharing and unless the provinces achieve better financial arrangements with the federal government," he said, "I can see major obstacles in the way of aspects of the constitutional review."

McKeough and his officials were vague in their descriptions of just what changes the federal government has proposed in the current formula for financing shared-cost programs with participating provinces.

It appears, however, that Ottawa has proposed a structure which would impose ceilings on expenditures for these programs in any given year and which would guarantee federal participation at least equal to current levels of support for the first year only.

In addition, Ottawa wants to integrate the medicare formula, which expires next year, with the hospital insurance formula.

NO CEILINGS

McKeough said Ontario does not believe ceilings can be placed on social programs which must increase with the growth in population, and that Ontario will be worse off,

BENSON

BLEAK FUTURE FACES JOBLESS

OTTAWA (CP)—Unemployment problems are likely to persist in Canada for at least three years, Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, said today.

The head of the federal advisory agency told the Commons finance committee that the effects of government policies of the last nine months to stimulate productive activity will be slow.

Any attempt to force a quicker pace of recovery would be difficult if not impossible, he said.

For example, the recent sharp expansion of money supply by the Bank of Canada, designed to make credit spending easier, will make an impact in 1972, not this year, Smith said.

Benson Charges Blackmail

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson attacked sections of Ontario's new budget Monday, calling it "fiscal blackmail" designed to retard progress on constitutional reform.

"Blackmail is not the way to accomplish something," Benson said in an interview.

"Anyone can say they are going to stop playing if they don't get their way."

The finance minister said Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough was resorting to blackmail in threatening to block constitutional reform if Ottawa ignores Ontario's attempts to get a bigger share of tax revenue.

McKeough's budget speech Monday said Ottawa is discriminating against Ontario economically. The speech also raised the possibility that Ontario might quit shared-cost programs with the federal government.

Benson suggested if Ontario is unhappy with proposed new federal tax laws "they can go their own way, like Quebec, with a separate income tax."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett echoed Benson's disagreement with Ontario's tactics, but said he sympathizes with that province's position.

"I don't support that tactic," he said in an interview of McKeough's threat to block constitutional reform if it doesn't get a larger share of federal tax money.

"But I sympathize with Ontario ... Ontario and British Columbia are getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The premier said B.C. gets a worse deal than Ontario because Ontario gets the benefit of national tariff policy which works against the export economy of B.C.

But Ontario suffers from the "unfair advantage" being gained by Quebec by the federal government's policy of funnelling national resources into that province, Bennett said.

"I guess Ontario finally got fed up with it," Bennett said, adding that Quebec has been using the tactic of threatening to pull out of Confederation to get its way.

Trotskyists Disrupt Constitution Hearing

MONTREAL (CP) — A noisy Trotskyist group disrupted the first Montreal hearing of the parliamentary committee on the constitution for about an hour Monday night, demanding that unemployment and social problems be the topic of discussion.

Shortly after one of them displayed a sign saying "Quebec independence is not for discussion," the meeting broke up in tumult.

Their first attempt to speak was drowned out when most of the audience rose and sang O Canada, but at the end of the anthem the activists' chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois" — Quebec for Quebecers — continued.

While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau sat by committee chairman Gil Molgat, senator from Manitoba, a throng of demonstrators, reporters, photographers and spectators milled about.

The demonstrators demanded that Michel Chartrand, a labor leader and Quebec nationalist spokesman, act as chairman and that author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon be allowed to speak.

Mr. Chartrand was not present and Vallieres and Gagnon are in jail on charges of supporting the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

GAVE OUT HANDBILLS

The demonstrators, who numbered less than a dozen, earlier distributed handbills signed by the Young Socialist League saying the Canadian constitution made them vomit.

When the demonstrators left, Mayor Drapeau said he could speak only as an individual because the constitution recognizes only the federal and provincial levels of government.

He did say in reply to a question, however, that in any new constitution municipalities should be the responsibility of only one level of senior government, and that he preferred the provincial level.

The Canada Committee, an independent citizens' group said Canada's constitution must guarantee French-speaking Canadians in other provinces "the same rights heretofore accorded English-speaking Canadians in Quebec."

This included the right to education in French and access to government and court services in French.

The committee recommends reconsideration of the role of the monarchy, but not its abolition. "Let us not dispense with traditions which are not harmful to our unity," it says.

13 BRIEFS PRESENTED

Of 13 briefs from the floor, nine were presented in English, including three from immigrants to Canada. They ranged from a sarcastic presentation by a newly-graduated engineer to a whimsical expression of faith in the monarchy by a film maker.

A submission on equal rights for Indian women complained that Indian women who marry white men lose their status as Indians both for themselves and for their children.

It cited instances in which such Indian women and their children were left with no legal standing because they were never issued a "certificate of enfranchisement" which can be issued to persons who cease to be Indians under the Indian Act.

Turkey Invokes Martial Law; New Violence

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Army commanders took over Istanbul, Ankara and other key areas of Turkey today as Premier Nihat Erim's government invoked martial law to clamp down on politically-inspired violence.

The martial-law provisions, covering 11 of Turkey's 67 provinces, were announced by Justice Minister Ismail Arar following a renewed wave of violence, including kidnappings and student battles with police and among themselves.

They are the widest-ranging security measures since the Second World War, giving military governors the right to declare curfews, institute personal and house searches, try offenders against martial law regulations by military court, and control radio and telephone communications.

The decisions were made by the premier four days after he warned that the full force of law and order would be invoked against organized groups seeking anarchy in the country.

Erim took office last month after the country's generals, alarmed at the deteriorating security situation, ousted Suleyman Demirel's government, threatening to take over themselves if a strong new administration was not formed.

Martial law will be effective for an initial period of one month, and can then be renewed with parliamentary approval for two more consecutive months.

ANTI-WAR, ECOLOGY LOBBIES UNITING . . .

Amchitka Growing Issue in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Rocks will slide down the cliffs into the sea, and the ground will roll like a trawler in the open ocean.

A 5,000-foot-wide crater will suddenly appear in the centre of Alaska's Amchitka Island, while deep in the island's volcanic rock the heat of the blast will create a huge cavern that will stay radioactive for a thousand years.

That will be Cannikin, a five megaton explosion planned for this fall that will be at once the largest underground atomic test in U.S. history and the focus of what promises to be one of the major rows in the United States in 1971.

The fact that Cannikin will be the first test of the warhead for the Spartan ABM will be enough to trigger the protests of the antiwar and disarmament lobbies. The fact that Cannikin will also explode with the force of a major earthquake is enough to touch off the tempers of most of the activists in today's environmental movement.

"I've never seen anything like it," said an aide to an antiwar senator last week. "Where we are looking for an issue to revive the ABM debate, and the AEC drops Cannikin in our lap. It's almost enough to enlist every ecology freak in the country."

The AEC privately promises that Cannikin will be its last big underground Alaskan test for the foreseeable future," but opponents talk as if Cannikin itself should not take place.

Most of Alaska's and Hawaii's congressional delegation and a number of congressmen from the west coast have talked of fighting Cannikin. Mainly, they fear that the test will trigger earthquakes or submarine tidal waves that might damage their states.

Somewhat typical in this response was Rep. Spark Matsunaga (D—Hawaii), who said he remembered the tidal waves that struck Hawaii in 1946 and 1960, "both of which originated in the Aleutian chain following earthquakes.

"It appears that the Atomic Energy Commission intends to conduct this test," Matsunaga said, "without releasing full information about the possibilities that it may cause a major earthquake and a resultant Tsunami (underwater tidal wave) which may

City Land Bids Fall Way Short

DUNCAN — Bids $30,000 below appraised values for three pieces of city property were rejected by city council on Monday. A second try to sell will be delayed.

At a special meeting council was offered $80,000 by the Duncan and District Credit Union for the area of the old municipal hall, old fire hall and library. Appraised value was $97,000.

Wai Sen Chow offered council $7,000 for the area of the old public work shop on Canada Avenue value at $12,000.

Ald. Allan Kerr suggested the city get out of the real estate business and try to raise the credit union's bid to $85,000 because a new structure would bring tax reversal. But Ald. Hamish Mutter advised against negotiations.

"You would be on very dangerous grounds. It could be misconstrued, he said.

Indians Delay Island Walk

DUNCAN — The Vancouver Island Tribal Federation has postponed until fall its Indian walkathon which was to be held from Duncan to Victoria on Sunday. All efforts will now be concentrated on the 100-mile moccasin march at Vancouver May 14, 15 and 16.

Some of the proceeds from the mainland walkathon will be channelled into the federation at Duncan to help coordinating activities of the 19 bands, corresponding secretary Larry Seymour of Duncan said.

Seymour said the federation, which reaches from Qualicum south and includes bands on the Saanich Peninsula and Port Renfrew, coordinates educational grograms and building projects.

"There are five big houses in the process of being planned and our federation can be very helpful in procuring material at a reasonable price for all projects," he said.

Pacific Rim 'Flat' Name

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Some residents of the west coast of Vancouver Island take a dim view of the name Pacific Rim National Park which has been given to a new park area on the Pacific shore of the island.

The Alberni Valley Times Monday lampooned the name with a front-page cartoon suggesting the idea for Pacific Rim came from an inflated inner tube. And the newspaper suggested the name "sounds flat."

In an accompanying editorial, the newspaper said "dull Ottawa has staggered the people's imagination by the lack of its own," adding "it doesn't make sense that Ottawa could come up with a name like this when the park and the area in which it is located is steeped in Indian tradition and the tradition of the sea."

Leslie McKinnon, chairman of the Alberni-Clayoquot regional district, said the name Pacific Rim sounds as though two bureaucrats sat down in Ottawa over a cup of coffee and came up with the name."

McKinnon said he will bring the matter up at a regional district meeting Wednesday night and see if a protest can be made to Ottawa.

GOALIE TO APPEAR AMONG DUNE BUGGIES

CHEMAINUS — Charlie Hodge, Vancouver Canucks goalie will be featured guest at the sport-o-rama at Fuller Lake Arena at Chemainus Saturday evening.

Hodge will be on hand at 6:30 p.m. to sign autographs.

Also featured at the two-day event will be trailers, campers, boats, dune buggies, terra jets, camping supplies and many other aspects of sports, said Wayne Buck, sport-o-rama organizer.

Doos are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.
